INGERSOLL'S

Great Speech at Indianapolis.

A SUPERB SAMPLE OF POLITI-CAL INVECTIVE.

wit, Sarcasm, Elequence, and Reason Combined.

The following is a serbstim report of Colonel

G. lugersoll's address before the "Boys in Boe" gathering at Indianapolis: LABORS AND GENTLEMEN, FELLOW-CITIZENS, Trunk Soldings: I am opposed to the cratic party; and I will tell you why. State that seceded from the United was a Democratic State. Every ordiof seccession that was drawn was drawn tance of secession that was drawn was drawn by a Democrat. Every man that endeavored to tear the old flag from the heaven that it enriches was a Democrat. [A voice—"Give it to them."] Every can that tried to destroy this nation was a Democrat. Every enemy this his nation was a Democrat. Every enemy this reat Bepublic has had for twenty years has sen a Democrat. Every man that shot Union soldiers was a Democrat. [Cheers—"That's oddiers was a Democrat attacked Union soldiers and refused them to the existentity of death a crust was a Democrat. [Renewed cheering.] Every man that loved slavery better than liberty was a Democrat. The man that assassinated Abraham Lincoln was a Democrat. Every man that sympathized with the assassin every man grad that the noblest President ever elected was presented was a Democrat; every man who seasonated was a Democrat constitution of whitping another wanted the privilege of whitping another man to make him work for him for nothing and pay him with lashes on his naked back was a Democrat [cheers]; every man that was a Democrat [cheers]; every man that was a Democrat; every man that clutched bloodhounds to pursue human beingstes a Democrat; every man that clutched from shricking, shuddering, crouching mothers, takes from their breasts and sold them into layery was a Democrat. [Cheers.] Every man that impaired the credit of the United layer, every man that swore we would never solders the greenbacks; every maligner this country's credit; every calumniator of the country's honor, was a Democrat. [Cheers.] recountry's honor, was a Democrat. an a Republican [Laughter and cheers.] ill tell you why. This is the only free gov-ment in the world. The Republican party [Laughter and cheers.] de it so. The Republican party took the party, with the wand of progress, touched auction block, and it became a school-se. [Cheers.] The Republican party put the rebellion, saved the nation, kept at slavery of every kind should be extir-ted from the face of this continent. [Cheers.] at more! I am a Republican because it is only free party that ever existed. It is party that has a platform as broad as hu-anity—a platform as broad as the buman of the labor of your hands—a party that o chains for the hands—no fetters for the [A voice—"Amen!" Cheers.] am a Republican because the Republican I am here in Indiana to speak, I have as good a right to speak here in ans as though I had been born on this i - upt because the fing of the State of ann saves over me. I would not know it in Illinois; not because the State flag of waves over me and you. [Cheers.] I am or of this being a nution. Think of a man for a has been a nution. Think of a man fying his cutter a multition in the State of its Island, [Laughter.] We want this to ustion, and you can't have a great grand, old people without having a great grand, did country. The great plairs, the suon of Ningara, mingle and enter ne s in the character of every American citian party because it says the Government don't say that you have to go away tome to jet the protection of the Gov-et. The Democratic party says the ent can't march its troops into the protect the rights of the crizens. [Great cheers.] The Government sitting by your fireside with your dren about you, and the old and the cat playing with the yarn, and appy and aweet-the Govern in in the valley of the shadow of you by the raddy, rearing guns, and a light for your flag. [A voice: "Amen!"] I am a Republican because the Republican party says: "We will protect the rights of American citizen at home, and, if necessary, we will march an army into any State to protect the rights of the humblest American citizen in that State." [Cheers.]

I am a Republican. [Laughter.] I am a Republican because that party allows me to be free—allows me to do my own thinking in my own way. [Cheers.] I am a Republican because it is a party grand enough and splendid enough and sublime enough to invite every human being in favor of liberty and progress to fight shoulder to shoulder for the advancement of mankind. [Cheers.] It invites the Methodist; it invites the Catholic; it invites the Presbyterian, and every kind of sectarian; it invites the free-thinker; it invites the infidel, provided he is in favor of giving to every other human being every chance and every right that he claims for himself. [Cheers.] I am a Republican, I tell you. [Laughter.] There is room in the Republican air for every wing; there is room on the Republican sea for every sail. Republicanism says to every man, "Let your soul be like an eagle; fly out in the great dome of thought, and question the stars for yourself. [Cheers." That's so."] But the Democratic party says; "Be blind, owis; sit on the dry limb of a dead tree, and only hoot when Tilden & Co. tell you to." [Laughter.] In the Republican party there are no followers. We are all leaders. [Cheers.] There is not a party chain. There is not a party lash. Any man that does not love fiberty; any man that in not in favor of human progress; that is not in favor of giving to others all he claims for himself—we don't ask him to vote the Republican ticket. [Cheers.] Tou can vote it if you please, and if there is any Democrat within hearing who expects to die before another election we are willing that he should vote one Republican ticket simply as a consolation upon his death-bed. [Great laughter.] What more! I am a Republican, because that party believes in free labor. It believes t thought, because it believes that free though will give us truth. [A voice—"Inat's so." You don't know what a grand party you be long to. I never want any bolier or grander title to nobility than that I belong to the Retitle to nobility than that I belong to the Republican party and have fought for the liberty of man. [Cheers.] The Republican party, I say, believes in free labor. The Republican party also believes in siavery.

What kind of slavery! In enslaving the forces of nature. We believe that free labor, that free thought, have enslaved the forces of nature and made them work for man. We make old Attraction and Gravitation work for us; we make the light-Gravitation work for us; we make the light-ning do our errands; we make steam-hammers and fashion what we need. The forcess of nature are the slaves of the Republican party. [Cheers.] They have got no backs to be nature are the slaves of the Republican party.
[Cheers.] They have got no backs to be whipped; they have got no hearts to be torn—no hearts to be broken; they cannot be separated from their wives; they cannot be dragged from the bosoms of their husbands; they work night and day, and they never tire. You cannot with them. they work night and day, and they never tire. You cannot whip them, you cannot starve them, and a Democrat even can be trusted with one of them. [Laughter.] I tell you I am a Republican. [Laughter.] I believe, as told you, that free labor would give us these, slaves. Free labor will produce all these things, and everything you have get to-day has been produced by free labor, nothing by slave labor. Slavery never invented but one machine, and that was a threshing machine in the shape of a whip. [Laughter.] Free labor has invented all the machines. We want to gome down to the philosophy of these things. The problem of free labor, when a man works for the wife he loves, when he works for the little children he the shortest space of time. The problem of slavery is to do the least work in the longest space of time. That is the difference. Free la-bor, love, affection—they have invented every-

You made the first free government in the world [cheers], and we must not forget the dead heroes. If they were home they would vote the Republican ticket, every one of them. I tell you we must not forget them. The past, as it were, rises before me like a dream. Again we are in the great struggle for national life. We hear the sounds of proparation-the music of the boisterous crumsilver voices of heroic bugles. We see thousands of assemblages, and hear the appeals of orators; we see the pair cheeks of women, and the flushed faces of men, and in those assemblages we see all the dead whose dust we have covered with flowers. We lose sight of them no more We are with them when we enlist in the great army of freedom. We see them part with those we are with them. We see them part with those they love. Some are walking for the last time in quiet woody places with the maidens they adore. We hear the whisperings and the sweet rows of eternal love as they lingeringly part forever. Others are bending over cradies, kiss-ing babes that are asleep. Some are receiving the blessings of old men. Some are parting with mothers who hold them and press them to their hearts again and again, and say nothing and some are talking with wives, and endeavo ing with brave words spoken in the old tones to drive from their hearts the awful fear. We see them part. We see the wife standing in the door with the babe in her arms—standing in the sunlight sobbing—at thing of use to the world. [Cheers.] I am a Republican. I tell you, my friends, this world is getting better every day, and the Democratic party is getting smailer every day. See the ad-vancement we have made in a few years; see what we have done. We have covered this nation with wealth and glory, and with liberty. This is the first free Government in the world.

The Republican party is the first party that was not founded on some compromise with the devil. [Laughter.] It is the first party of pure, square, honest principles; the first one. And we have got the first free country that ever existed. And right here I want to thank every soldier that fought to make it free [cries of "good" "good!" and cheers; every one, Itving and dead. I thank you again and again and again.

by holding high in her loving hands the child. He is gone, and forever. We see them all as they march proudly away we see them all as they march productly away under the flaunting flags, keeping time to the wild grand music of war—marching down the streets of the great cities—through the towns, and across the prairies—down to the fields of glory, to de, and to die for the eternal right.

We go with them one and all. We are, by their side on all the gory fields—in all the hos-pitals of pain—on all the weary marches. We stand guard with them in the wild sterm and under the quiet stars. We are with them in ravines running with blood—in the furrows of old fields. We are with them between tontendlife cibing slowly away among the withered leaves. The past rises before us, and we see four mil lions of human beings governed by the Inch-we see them bound hand and foot-we hear the strokes of cruel whips—we see the hounds tracking women through tangled swantps. We see babes sold from the breasts of mothers. Cruelty unspeakable! Outrage infinite! Four million bodies in chains—four million souls in fetters! These heroes are dead. They died for liberty -they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free, under the lang they rendered stainless; under the solemn pines. they rendered stainless; under the solemn pixes, they rendered stainless; under the solemn pixes, the sad hemiceks, the tearful willows, and the embracing vines. They sleep beneath the Democratic triumph—then, I say, we will be shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or of storm, each in the windowless palace of rest. Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battle, in the roar of conflict, they found the aerenity of death. [A voice, "Glory."] I have one sentiment for the soldiers, living and dead—cheers for the living and tears for the dead.

There are three questions now submitted to the American people. The first is, Shall the people that saved this country rule it? [Cries of "Yes, yes."] Shall the men that saved the old flag hold it! [Cries of "Yes, yes."] Shall the men who saved the ship of State sail it! [Cries of "Yes, yes, yes,"] or shall the rebels walk her quarter-deck, give the orders and sink it! [Cries of "No, no."] That is the question. Shall a solid South, a united South solidified by the shot gur—shall a united South with the aid of a divided North, shall they control this great and sales of the context. gun—shall a united South with the aid of a divided North, shall they control this great and splendid country! [Cries of "Never, never."] Well, then, the North must wake up. [Cries of "We will, we will."] We are right back where we were in 1861. This is simply a prolongation of the war. This is the war of the idea; the other was the war of the musket. The other was the war of the cannon; this is the war of thought, and we have got to beat them in this war of thought; recollect that. The question war of thought; recollect that. The question is, Shall the men that endeavored to destroy this country rul e it! [Cries of "Never, never."] Shall the men that said this is not a Nation, have charge of this Nation! [Cries of "Never,

The next question, Shall we pay our debts?
[Cries of "Yes! yes! and every cent!"] We had to borrow some money to pay for shot and shell to shoot Democrats with. We found that shell to shoot Democrats with. We found that we could get along with a few less Democrats [laughter], but not with any less country, and so we borrowed the money, and the question now is, Will we pay it! And which party is the most apt to pay it, the Republican party, that made the debt—the party that swore it was constitutional, or the party that said it was unconstitutional? Whenever a Democrat sees a greenback the greenback says to the was unconstitutional? Whenever a Democrat sees a greenback the greenback says to the Democrat, "I am the one that whipped you." [Laughter.] Whenever a Republican sees a greenback, the greenback says to him, "You and I put down the rebellion and saved the country." [Laughter.] Now, my friends, you have heard a great deal about finances. Nearly everybody that talks about it gets as dry—just as if they had been in the final home of the Democratic party for forty years. of the Democratic party for forty years.
[Great laughter.] I will give you my ideas about finances. [A voice. "Let's hear them."] In the first place the Government don't support the people; the people support the Government. [A voice. "That's it."] The Government. ernment. [A voice. "That's it."] The Government passes around the hat, the Government passes around the hat, the Government passes around the alms-dish. True enough, it has a musket behind it, but it is a perpetual chronic pauper. It passes, I told you, the alms-dish, and we all throw in our share—except Tilden. [Great laughter.] This Government is a perpetual consumer. You understand me—the Government don't raise corn and wheat; the Government is simply a perpetual consumer. We support the Government. ["That's right."] Now, the idea that the Government can make money for you and me to live on—why, it is the same as though my hired man should issue certificates of my indebtedness to him for me to live on. though my hired man should issue certificates of my indebtedness to him for me to live on. [Laughter and applause.] Some people tell me that a government can impress its sovereignty on a piece of paper, and that is money. Well, if it is, what is the use of wasting it in making $1 bills! It inkes no more ink and no more paper—why not make $1,000,000,000 bills, and all be billionaires! [Great laughter.] If the Government can make money what on earth does it collect taxes from you and me for! Why don't it make what money it wants, take the taxes out. make what money it wants, take the taxes out, and give the balance to us? [Laughter.] Mr. Greenbacker, suppose the Government issued Greenbacker, suppose the Government issued $100,000,000 to morrow; how would you get any of it? [A voice—"Steal it."] I was not speaking to the Democrate. [Laughter.] You would not get it unless you had something to exchange for it. The Government would not go around and give you your average. You have to have some corn, or wheat, or pork to give for it. How do you get money? By work. Where from! You have to dig it out of the roound. That is where it comes from. In old where from? You have to dig it out of the ground. That is where it comes from. In old times there were some men who thought they could get some way to turn the baser metals into gold, and old, gray-haired men, trembling, tottering on the verge of the grave, were hunting for something to turn ordinary metals into gold; they were searching for the fountain of eternal youth; but they did not find it. No human car has ever heard the silver guigle of the spring of immortal youth. There used to be mechanics that tried to make perpetual motion by combinations of wheels, shifting weights, and rolling balls; but somehow the machine and rolling balls; but somehow the machine would never quite run. A perpetual fountain of greenbacks, of wealth without labor, is just as foolish as a fountain of eternal youth. The idea that you can produce money without labor is just as foolish as the idea of perpetual motion. They are old foliles under new names. Let me tell you another thing. The Democrats seem to think that you can fail to keep a promise so long that it is as good as though you had kept it. They say you can stamp the sovereignty of the Government upon paper. The other day I the Government upon paper. The other day is of Julius Casar. Julius Casar has been due about two thousand years, but that piece of silver was worth just as much as though Julius Was it his sovereignty that made it valuable! Suppose he had put it upon a piece of paper— it would have been of no more value than a lesar was at the head of the Roman legions it would have been of no more value than a Democratic promise. Another thing, my friends; this deht will be paid; you need not worry about that. The Democrats ought to pay it. They lost the suit and they ought to pay the costs. [Laughter and applause.] But we are willing to pay our share. It will be paid. The holders of the debt have got a mortgage on a continent. They have a mortgage on the honor of the Republican party, and it is on record. tinent. They have a mortgage on the honor of the Republican party, and it is on record. Every binde of grass that grows upon the continent is a guarantee that the debt will be paid; every field of bannered corn in the great, glorious West is a guarantee that the debt will be paid; all the coal put away in the ground millions of years ago by that old miser, the sun, is a guarantee that every dollar of that debt will be paid; all the cattle on the prairies, pastures and plains. the cattle on the prairies, pastures and plains, every one of them is a guarantee that this debt will be paid; every pine standing in the sombre forests of the North, waiting for the woodman's axe, is a guarantee that this debt will be paid; all the gold and silver hid in the Sterra Nevadas waiting for the miner's pick is a guarantee that the debt will be paid; every locomotive, with its muscles of from and breath of flame, and all the boys and girls bending over their books at school, every dimpled child in the cradle, every good man and every good woman, and every man that votes the Republican ticket, is a guarman that votes the Republican locket, is a guar-antee that the debt will be paid. [Applause.] What is the next question! The next ques-tion is, Will we protect the Union meu in the South! [Voices—"Yes, yes."] I tell you the white Union men there have suffered enough. It is a crime in the Southern States to be a Re publican. It is a crime in every Southern State to love this country, to believe in the sacred rights of men. I tell you the colored people have suffered enough. They have been owned by Democrats for 200 years. Worse than that: they have been forced to keep the company of their owners. [Laughter.] It is a terrible thing to live with a man that steals from you. They have suffered enough. For 200 years they were branded like cattle. Yes, for 200 years every human tie was torn asunder by the cruci hand of avaries and greed. For 200 years chilfrom their wives, brothers from brothers, sisters from sisters. There was not, during the whole rebellion, a single negro who was not our friend. We are willing to be reconciled to our Southern brethren when they will treat our friends as men. When they will be just to the friends of this country; when they are in favor of allowing every American citizen to have his rights—then we are their friends. We are willing to trust them with the nation when they are friends of the nation. We are willing to trust them with liberty when they believe in liberty. We are willing to trust them with the black man when they cease riding in the darkness of night—those masked wretches—to the hut of the freedman, and notwithstanding the prayers and supplicatheir friends, and not before. [A voice-"That

Now, my friends, thousands of the Southern people and thousands of the Northern Democrate are afraid that the negroes are going to pass them in the race of life. Aud, Mr. Democrat, he them in the race of life. And, Mr. Democrat, he will do it unless you attend to your business. The simple fact that you are white cannot save you always. You have got to be industrious, honest, and cultivate a sense of justice. If you don't, the colored race will pass you as sure as you live. I am for giving every man a chance. Anybody that can pass me is welcome. [A voice, "There can't many do it."] I believe, my friends, that the intellectual domain of the future, like the land used to be in the State of Illinois, is open to pre-emption. The fellow that Illinois, isopen to pre-emption. The fellow that gets a fact first, that is his; that gets an idea first, that is his. Every round in the ladder of fame, from the one that touches the ground to the last one that leans against the shining summit of human ambition belongs to the foot that gets upon it first. [Appelause] Mr. Bennezet.

mit of human ambition belongs to the foot that gets upon it first. [Applause.] Mr. Democrat (I point down because they are nearly all on the first round of the ladder), if you can't climb, stand on one side and let the deserving negro pass. I must tell you one thing. I have told it so much, and you have all heard it. I have no doubt, fifty times from others, but I am going to tell it again because I like it.

Suppose there a great horse-race here to day, free to every horse in the world, and to all the mules, and all the scrubs, and all the donkeys. At the tap of the drum they come to the line, and the judges say, "Is it a go!" Let me ask you, what does the blooded horse, rushing ahead, with nostrils distended, drinking in the breath of his own swiftness, with his mane flying like of his own swiftness, with his mane flying like a banner of victory, with his veins standing out all over him as if a net of life had been cast around him—with his thin neck, his high withers, his trenulous fianks—what does he care how many mules and donkeys run on that track. [Prolonged and deafening laughter.] But the Democratic scrub, with his chuckle-head and lop ears, with his tail full of cockleburs, jumping high and short, and digging in chap that jumps the track and says: "I am down on mule equality." [Renewed and up-roarious laughter.] My friends, the Republican party is the blooded

My friends, the Republican party is the blooded horse in the race. [A voice—"Anything may follow that wants to." Laughter.] I stood a little while ago in the city of Paris where stood the Bastile, where now stands the Column of July, surmounted by the figure of Liberty. In its right hand is a broken chain, in its left hand its right hand is a broken chain, in its left hand a banner; upon its forehead a glittering starand as I looked upon it I said, such is the Republican party of my country.

The other day going along the road I came to the place where the road had been changed, but the guide-board was as they had put it twenty years before. It pointed diligently in the direction of a desolate field. Now, that guide-roat has been there for twenty years guide-roat has been there for twenty years. guide-post has been there for twenty year Thousands of people passed but noboc beeded the hand on the guide-post, and stuck there through storm and shine, and it pointed as hard as ever as if the road was through the desolate field, and I said to myself, "Such is the Democratic party of the United States." [Laughter and applause.] The other day I came to a river where there had been a mill; a part of it was there yet. An old sign said, "Cash for wheat." [Laughter.] The old water-wheel was broken; it had been warped by the sun, cracked and split by many winds and storms. There hadn't been a grain of wheat ground there for twenty years. There was nothing in good order but the dam; it was as good a dam as I ever saw, and I said to myself, "Such is the Democratic party."

[Renewed laughter.]
I was going along the road the other day. when I came to where there had once been a hotel. But the hotel and barn had burned down; nothing remained there but the two chimneys, monuments of the disaster. In the were these words: "Entertainment for man and beast." The word "man" was nearly burned out, There hadn't been a hotel there for thirty years. That sign had swung and creaked in the wind; the show had fallen upon it in the winter, the birds had sung upon it in the summer. Nobody ever stopped at the standard were truck to it, and kept it in the summer. Nobody ever stopped at that hotel; but the sign stuck to it, and kept swearing to it, "Entertainment for man and beast;" and I said to myself, "Such is the Democratic party of the United States."

[Laughter.] And I further said, "One chimney ought to be called Tilden and the other Hendricks." [Renewed and continued cheering and laughter.]

Now, my friends, both of these parties have candidates. The Democratic party trots out Samuel J. Tilden. Who is he! He is a man that advertises his honesty and reform, the same as people advertise quack medicines. In every Democratic paper in the United States he Samuel J. Tilden is an attorney—a legal spider that weaves webs of technicalities, and catches in its meshes honest incorporated flies. He has stood on the shores of bankruptey and clutched the drowning by the throat. Samuel J. Tilden is a demurrer that the Confederate Congress has flied against the amendments to the Constitu-tion of the United States. Samuel J. Tilden is an old bachelor. In a country depending upon the increase of its population for its glory and honor [cheers and laughter], to elect an old bachelor is a suicidal policy. [Renewed and prolonged laughter]. Think of a man sur-rounded by beautiful women, dimpled cheeks, coral lips, pearly teeth, shining eyes! think of a man throwing them all away for the embrace of the Democratic party. [Laughter.] Such a man does not know the value of time. [Laugh-party of the city of New York. That party never had but two objects—grand and petit larceny. [Laughter.] They rarely elect a man to office except for a crime committed. They don't elect on a crime eredit; it must be a crime accomplished. They have stolen everything they could lay their hands on, and, m God, what hands! When they had stolen a God, what hands! When they had stolen all the people could pay the interest on they clapped their enormous hands upon their spa-cious pockets and shouled for honesty and re-form. Samuel J. Tilden has been a pupil in that school. He has been a teacher in that school. He was reared in Tammany Hall, school. He was reared in Tammany Hall, which bears the same religion to a penitentiary as the Sunday school to a church. [Applause.] called a meeting at Union Square, in the city of New York. It was of great importance how the city of New York should go. No man refused to sign that petition in the city of New York but one, and that man was Samuel J. Tilden. A man that will not lend his name to save his country naver should be the President of that country You offered to save your lives, and the would not give his infamous name.

Now, my friends, I want you to vote the Re publican ticket. [A voice, "We will do it." want you to swear you will not vowe for a mar who opposed putting down the rebellion. I want you to swear you will not yote for a man opposed to the proclamation of emuncipation. want you to swear that you will not vote for man opposed to the utter abolition of slavery want you to swear that you will never vote to a man who called the soldiers in the field Lin cein hirelings. I want you to swear 1 hat you will not vote for a man who denounced Lincoln as a tyrunt. I want you to swear that you will not vote for any enemy of human progress. Go and talk to every Democrat that you can see get him by the cont-collar; talk to him; hold him, like Coleridge's Ancient Mariner, with your glittering eye; hold him; tell him all the nean things his party ever did; tell him kindly; m in a Christian spirit, as I do, but zell [Applause and laughter.] Recollect there never was a more important election than the one you are going to hold in Indiana. I want you every one to swear that you will vote for giorious Ben. Harrison. [Tremendous my-It is a giorious country. It permits you and me to be free. It is the only country world where labor is respected. Let us s it. It is the only country in the world the useful man is the only aristocrat. The mean that works for a dollar a day goes home at night to his little once, takes his little boy on his knee, and he thinks that boy can achieve an a-thing that the sons of the wealthy man can achieve. The free schools are open to him; he may be the richest, the greatest, and grandest; and that thought sweetens every drop of sweat that rolls down the honest face of toil. DEMOCRATIC OPINIONS

SAMUEL J. TILDEN,

Expressed Prior to the St. Louis

The True Character of the Man as Portrayed by his own Partisans.

FROM THE CINCINNATI ENQUIRER "There are a few facts concerning Sam Tilden which we trust will sink into the minds of Western and Southern Democrats:
"1. He cannot carry his own State in No

"2. He cannot carry any Northern State.
"3. He is a hypocrite, a political swindler, has long been a public plunderer, and is really the only disreputable candidate prominently named on the Democratic side.
"4. He has sought this high office by methods so unprecedentedly shameless and disreputable that it would be an everlasting stigma upon a harmonic strength."

Democratic convention to nominate him, and a reproach upon the American people to elect him

'Should 'God's providence, seeming estran "Should 'God's providence, seeming estranged, permit his nomination, by whom and what would he be nominated! By the servile, conscienceless tools that money can purchase; by the most corrupt influences that ever entered into a Presidential nomination; by the system on which all other quack medicines are sold—advertising—and even respectable medical ascociations rend out of the profession doctors that will advertise. It would seem that the Demowill advertise. It would seem that the Demo-eratic party should have as high a respect for the good name of the party and the Government as the vendors of pills have for their craft. It could not but be that a man educated in cunning, hypocrisy, and iniquity, nominated in cor-ruption and shamless effrontery, even though his millions could elect him, would give us the most corrupt administration the country has ever known. Neither imperial dignities nor the gloom of solitude, says Theitus, could save Ti-berius from himself, and Tilden could not rise above himself, or above the sources of his power. "There are many reasons why Governor Tilden should not be nominated, and why, if n minated, he will be defeated. He has been to minated, he will be defeated. He has been too closely identified, socially and politically, and legally—we will not say financially—with the Tweed regime of New York. When Tweed escaped from the custody of the Sheriff of New York, many months ago, the Boss was not only a penitentiary convict, who had not fulfilled one-fifth of his term, but was being tried on a civil suit to recover $3,000,000—but a portion of the amount he had stolen from the city. There was every likelihood of making Tweed diagorge, but the Sheriff's officers were bribed, no doubt, and the Boss went on his way rejoicing. Tilden, the next day, with a flourish of trumpets, dethe next day, with a flourish of trumpets, de-clared that the Sheriff, who was under bonds, was liable for Tweed's escape; and further-more, to pay over to the city $3,000,000, for which Tweed was held, and which suit, as a matter of course, must go by default! Nearly ten mouths have since elapsed. Tweed has not been caught. The Sheriff of New York (Con-ner) still holds his post, and his bail bond and property, and all effort to capture and bring back the Boss has been abandoned. The people of New York city hold Tilden responsible for retaining in office a Sheriff who lets fly the great the next day, with a flourish of trumpets, de retaining in office a Sheriff who lets fly the great thleves of the Ring who nearly bankrupted the city. Another objection to Tilden is his aristocratic preclivities. The common people of New York do not like him. His money helped to elect him two years ago. He is a bachelor, with an ample fortune of four or fire millions. with an ample fortune of four or five millions, and spent it freely, or let his friends spend it freely for him, in the campaign of 1874. Until his election for Governor he was hardly known outside of New York. Tilden and his friends hambeouled the poor working men of New York by telling them they could have plenty of work, at good wages, if they would vote for him for Governor. They did so, To-day there are more idle men in New York city than when Dix was Governor. Besides, wages have been cut down."

"Supreme selfishness, and a cold, unscrupu lous, cunning nature, are his marked charac-teristics. The intensity of his selfishness has destitute of magnetism or emotion as a muminy Having devoted the earlier portion of his life t the study of the art of money-making, he praticed it with a success which, within a few years, by one means and another, put millions in his purse. When he felt assured that the downfall of his former Tammany associates was inevi-table, he hastened to promote that result Having possessed himself of the party machin-ery, he used it to secure the nomination for Governor, and succeeded on account of the want of any organized opposition, and the de-termined declination of the man whom the party really desired to nominate. Having be-come Governor, every act has been performed with an eve single to the next step. Finding that to attack corruption and fraud was popu-lar, and that the public mind was suspicious o any against whom charges were made, he lessi-tated not to promote attacks upon those in every respect his superiors, but whom he thought were possible impediments in his path that, as Governor, he succeeded in a single year in reducing the Democratic unjority over thirty-five thousand votes, notwithstanding the unquestionably popular attack upon the canal frauds and mismanagement, is conclusive evi-dence of his want either of capacity or tast to successfully lead the Democratic party of the Empire State. That he is an inefficient, hesitating, and unreliable public officer, is pelpable He is neither prompt, nor frank, nor generous nor agreeable, nor popular. To say that the Democracy of the Union really seek such a can-didate is to say that they are unfitted to select a

Yet again the Times says: "There is a great stress put upon the ser-vices of Tilden in 'breaking up the Tweed Ring. Tilden was a co-worker with Tweed for years and did not open his mouth against him until Jimmy O'Brien and the New York Times had furnished many of the leading facts to the raged community could no longer stand the frauds of the Rings, but were determined to break them up, then it occurred to our great railroad financier that the opportune moment had arrived for him to make capital out of the facts of fraud with which for years he had been familiar. Had the public remained indifferent to the frauds of Tweed, there is no reason to doubt that Mr. Tilden would have been as mun as a mouse up to this very day."
FROM THE NEW YORK "EXPRESS "

"While New York Democrats have not changed their position Governor Tilden has changed his. He is no longer for Seymour, nor for Church, nor for say man in the land but Samuel J. Tilden! * * The Tribune wants to know the reason of opposition in the country to Governor Tilden. If it will read the ad answered. If it will read the disreputable r cord of public opinion, manufactured and circulated through a large advertising agency in this city, it will find an answer. as we know, of the appliances used all over the State to elect and defeat delegates for the Utica Convention it would ask for no other answerbut, beyond this, there are ample reasons. There are better men. There are more popula men; men just as true as reformers, just as honest, just as true to principles and to the country, more faithful to friends, of quicker perception, of better judgment, of more executive ability, less selfish, less ambitious, and wholly incapable of making the bad record wholly incapable of making the bad record which has stirred so many thousands in this State either to a preference for some other man or to a more direct opposition to Governor Tilden. We might add many other reasons, but we forbear for to-day at least."

Again, June 22, it says t

trusted as a candidate. The losses have he 2 too frightful upon the one hand, and the private gains too enormous on the other, to make any man, identified, as Mr. Tilden is, with railroads, the proper candidate for the President of the United States. We seek simply to avoid the defeat of the Democratic party in November next by using all fair and honorable means to prevent an unwise nomination at St. Louis."

FROM THE CHICAGO "TIMES."

"Tilden and Hendricks combined would be a guarantee of the success of the Hayes party, even in Indiana. " " Instead of a strong ticket, Tilden and Hendricks would probably be found the weakest ticket that could be made. Tilden, without Hendricks, might carry New York, were it not that Tilden's nomination would inevitably give Indiana to the Hayes party in October. Hendricks, without Tilden, might possibly (but not probably) carry Indiana, but certainly not New York. Connecticut, or New Jersey. But Tilden and Hendricks combined would be a trade-mark of political dishonesty that all honest citizens would spurn. It would not get an electoral vote north of the Ohio river. For Tilden to swallow Hendricks and survive is an imaginable possibility. For Hendricks to swallow Tilden and survive is an imaginable possibility. But for Tilden and Hendricks to swallow cach other and survive is plainly not within the bounds of things possible."

FROM THE PHILADELPHIA "TIMES." "Without dealing with the question, whether or not Tilden deserves to be elected over Hayes, we turn to the practical and vital fact that he would be defeated by the largest popular majority ever cast against any candidate, excepting Mr. Greeley. He would be pitted against the same Mr. Hayes who owes his election over Allen in 1872 and thereby his compation. Allen in 1875, and thereby his nomination in 1876, to the open defection of Mr. Tilden's friends and their defiant assaults upon their own party and its candidates, and the October elec-tions in Ohio and Indiana would be awept by tens of thousands for Haves, with New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Connecticut cer-tain to follow in November by majorities second only to Grant's in 1872."

FROM THE CADIZ (OHIO) "SENTINEL." FROM THE CADIZ (OHIO) "SENTINEL."

Bates & Locke, advertising agents, of New York, send us some puffs of that old bull-headed Bullionist, Sam Tilden, which they want inserted as reading matter, and for which they offer to pay us in 'rag money.' We do not insert advertisements among reading matter, and therefore decline their offer. The proprietors of 'sugar coated' pills, who advertise in the Santing have to assume the research and Sestine, have to assume the pressure and bumbug the people by shouldering the responsibility in the regular advertising columns. But this Tilden matter has another objection. The laws of Ohio forbid newspapers advertising abortion goods."

FROM THE PETERSBURG (VA.) "INDEX-"What we urge is that the public should be enlightened as to the depth and origin of this lately-born clamor for Tilden. It is meretri-cious and mechanical; as soon as his nomination is made the people will fall off from the ticket in disgust. Now pause and inquire, while there is yet time, about the truth of the while there is yet time, about the truth of the matter. Respectable journals like the Memphis Avalanche, the Savannah News, the Augusta Chronicle, testify to having been approached with money in the interest of this New York candidate, and there is indisputable and undisputed evidence that an advertising agency in New York is running off Mr. Tilden's name as Helmhold was wont to do his buchu. Is the strength so based a safe one on which to build the Democratic canyass? If so, go on: build the Democratic canvass? If so, go on; we wash our hands of the responsibility." FROM THE NEW HAVEN "UNION."

FROM THE NEW HAVEN "UNION."

"Governor Tilden meets with admirable success in capturing Democratic conventions in States where the party has virtually no existence. The sure Democratic States are all bitterly opposed to Tilden, so far as public sentiment is concerned, but Tilden's money has a perceptible influence on the delegates. It would not surprise us in the least should Tilden pull through. He is utterly unserupulous, and by his lavish expenditure of money now, he is raising hope in the breasts of impecunious strikers that money will flow like water if he becomes the standard-bearer."

PROMINENT DEMOCRATS DENOUNCE HIM.

HON. AUGUSTUS SCHELL. "I am decidedly and unalterably opposed to Governor Tilden as a Presidential candidate. He is bitterly opposed by some of the best known and most influential Democrats in the State, in the metropolis, and all through the interior. It is idle to talk of his ability to carry New York." COLONEL ISAAC R. EATON.

"If Tiden is nominated, the Greenback mea will organize and nominate a candidate on a Greenback platform in less than thirty days from sas Democrate will utterly refuse to support Tilden."

GENERAL JAMES B. STEADMAN

"Under no circumstances that could be imagined would we accept Tilden. If Tilden should unfortunatety receive the nomina Hayes would beat him in Ohio by 60,000 to 000 majority, and in Indiana he would be beaten by from 20,000 to 25,000. If any other man that has been named should be nominated on a plat-form declaring in favor of an immediate repeal of the resumption act, we can carry Ohio by 25,000 majority. We would not even accept Tilden on a platform with that plank in it, because the man and the platform would neutralize each other. If the city of Toledo, in which I live, is to be taken as at all a test of the State,

Those who claim that Tilden is unassailable do not know him or if they do, then they are quite as dishonest as he is, He has been counsel for all the broken-down corporations with which New York has been afflicted for a long term of years, and out of them he has not come with clean hands."

GENERAL EWING, OF OHIO. "I am very much surprised at one thing. The advocacy of Tilden comes either from States that are innately Democratic or hopelessly Republican, while two great States whose vote is the index to the final result of the fight are ar the index to the huai result of the agin are ar-rayed sternly against him. It is also a curious thing that Manning, editor of the Albany paper regarded as Tilden's special organ, should, in an interview in St. Louis, make the statement that Governor Tilden is looking for the receipt of the votes of a large number of Republicans in New York."

HON, GEORGE W. HOUK, delegate to the St. Louis Convention from Ohio, says :

"The party can survive a Presidential defeat, as it has already survived three since 1864, inau as it has already survived three since 1864, inau-gurated under the same auspices and leadership as the present, but it cannot survive the sacri-fice of the great principle of fidelity to the rights of the people which it was organized to maintain. * * He [Tilden] has used his fortune with a lavish hand to promote his po-litical aspirations. He is the first aspirant for Presidential honors in the history of the coun-try who has utilized the provincial press by adtry who has utilized the provincial press by advertising his qualifications as extensively and as successfully as Helmhold advertised his buchu. Such a man, fellow-citizens, who relies upon such instrumentalities, and who seeks by indi-rection to compase his personal advancement, is not the man to lead the Democratic party to victory in this Centennial year of the Re-severely castigated Tilden before a crowd of delegates at St. Louis, and said: "The greater part of the State is opposed to Tilden now; a large pdrt of the New York delegation was opposed to him; and it meant something, this op-position, for the opposing faction comprised all, or nearly all, the brains of the delegation. With Tilden it was impossible to carry Indiana and Ohio in October, and if they were not carried for the Democratic party, there would be no cause for rejoicing in November.
