

New York, November 6, 1976.

Before this letter reaches your readers the great struggle will have been decided. I can't avoid giving the democracy credit for the most intense display of the campaign.

Thursday night was the appointed time for the grand demonstration and it was certainly the largest in the kind New York ever saw, excepting the last Fourth of July procession.

A fashionable dressmaker in this city is now furnishing the bride outfit for a Michigan girl. It is something worth seeing these hard times.

Autumn fashions. Forms of dress never were more graceful and sedition more convenient than they are the present season.

The barbers are the last tradesmen to be exercised. The dull times have driven thousands from the country, and they are shaving for five cents.

The attempt to find the bones and erect a monument to the memory of the noted Indian chief, Tecumseh, recalls the story of the death of the British commander.

The business outlook. Business is tolerable good, but there has been a lull which the jobbers do not like.

The liquor question. The liquor dealers are taking a new departure. The law of 1899 provides that licenses shall not be granted except to restaurants having accommodations for men and women.

Feasting process. A lean cow or ox is a very different animal from one that is fattened from fat animals of the same kind.

Father, Bill Jones has a pair of fine boots and I want a pair, too, to wear to the picnic.

I am in a confounded mess, any way. I'd just as much work as Bill Jones does, and more too.

Father, I've got everything done, even to the harness! I guess they'll stand till you are ready, and I want to go with Bill Jones.

Well, you'll have a more quiet time without you. Now for the boots! I've got to get up stairs to that little shop where he keeps them.

Here I am all right, boys and all they ain't a bit too large, and I'll be over to Mr. Jones, in less than ten minutes.

Well, I'll have to black up my coarse ones or stay at home. He won't try that game the second time, I can tell you.

Well, you did beat me home! I'll bet you've got 'em. Whose boots have you got now?

Well, here are my boots just as I left them. I don't see how in the world it happened to be mistaken.

Well, here are my boots just as I left them. I don't see how in the world it happened to be mistaken.

In nothing do the young crowd advise better than at the age when they are just entering upon manhood.

Richard, do you want anything? "Yes I do!" he yelled back, "I want to know where in Texas that Cokerker is."

"Well, Richard, I know that I have never seen a cokerker in this house."

"Then you are as blind as an owl in daylight!" he cried, "I've never seen one in my life."

"The house is as well kept as any of your folks can keep one," she retorted, growing red in the face.

"I'll leave you." "And I'll go to see you," Nancy Thornton, I'll tell you for a divorce tomorrow.

"Nancy Thornton, I'll tell you for a divorce tomorrow." "I'll tell you for a divorce tomorrow."

"Nancy Thornton, I'll tell you for a divorce tomorrow." "I'll tell you for a divorce tomorrow."

"Nancy Thornton, I'll tell you for a divorce tomorrow." "I'll tell you for a divorce tomorrow."

The bolt on the back door needed repairs for a long time, but it was only the other night that Mr. Throckmold's presence of mind to buy a new one and take it home.

"Richard, do you want anything?" "Yes I do!" he yelled back, "I want to know where in Texas that Cokerker is."

"Well, Richard, I know that I have never seen a cokerker in this house."
