

THE GREAT ROBBERY AND WHO DID IT?

She had just got outside the door when she heard steps approaching, and she crouched in the shadow of a column. She drew herself into the smallest space possible to wait till she had passed into the room where she had been told to wait.

After she had heard that piece of news she crept back to her little room, where all her troubles were wept away, and sat there all day, but no tears came to her this time.

Thinking these thoughts she sat there till twilight came, and the light of the glorious California day faded into darkness, and then the longing for sympathy drew her to her Aunt. She went to her room and sat down on the carpet at her feet.

Poor Nels! his heart, that had been so long invulnerable to feminine charms, had fallen a victim; a willing captive to the sweet innocence and childish grace of his passionate little cousin and had been betrayed so purely good to have a single thought that was deceptive or unlovely in any way.

They were to start Wednesday, so on Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Sanborn sent for her lawyer, and telling him of her proposed trip, also told him she wished him to take responsibility to own house for safety. He advised her to take it to a bank, but she refused so decidedly that he consented. She then called James and bid him pack the plate at once and place it in the carriage; and she and the lawyer and Annie left together to the room where the money was kept.

Mrs. Sanborn looked against her a moment, and then looked again, and looked on every shelf, but he did not see her, and passed into the room which was locked behind it, and the door of the room had been locked when they came in, and the shutters of the windows were bolted on the inside—a very mysterious case, altogether. The lawyer was the first to speak.

"Are you certain you put it in there?" "Perfectly certain." "You could not have made a mistake or removed it afterward?" "Positively not. I do not look like one who makes mistakes."

"Then it must have been stolen." "I think so." "It certainly looks very much like it. Have you a suspicion that any of your household could have taken it?" "No, I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion."

"Where is your nephew?" "At this question Mrs. Sanborn turned on him with flashing eyes, and said: "Do not imagine for an instant that it was he. It would be impossible for him to do such a thing. You all deny him for the worst boy in the world, whereas he is one of the best. Besides, he has been gone eight days."

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

At this question Mrs. Sanborn turned on him with flashing eyes, and said: "Do not imagine for an instant that it was he. It would be impossible for him to do such a thing. You all deny him for the worst boy in the world, whereas he is one of the best. Besides, he has been gone eight days."

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

At this question Mrs. Sanborn turned on him with flashing eyes, and said: "Do not imagine for an instant that it was he. It would be impossible for him to do such a thing. You all deny him for the worst boy in the world, whereas he is one of the best. Besides, he has been gone eight days."

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

At this question Mrs. Sanborn turned on him with flashing eyes, and said: "Do not imagine for an instant that it was he. It would be impossible for him to do such a thing. You all deny him for the worst boy in the world, whereas he is one of the best. Besides, he has been gone eight days."

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

At this question Mrs. Sanborn turned on him with flashing eyes, and said: "Do not imagine for an instant that it was he. It would be impossible for him to do such a thing. You all deny him for the worst boy in the world, whereas he is one of the best. Besides, he has been gone eight days."

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

"I do not know," said Mrs. Sanborn, "but I am sure that they are all trustworthy, and I have my servants. As to Annie, she is above suspicion." "Where is your nephew?"

JOHN F. BLYMYER, DEALER IN Hardware, Iron, Nails, Glass, Paints, OILS & C.

SHOVELS, FORKS, SPADES, RAKES. Mattocks, Grab Hoes, Picks, Scythes, Sledges, Mason Hammers, Cast Steel, Step Ladders, Carriage and Tire Bolts of all sizes.

No. 3, "BAER'S BLOCK" JOHN F. BLYMYER. April 8 '74. A good citizen, who has the cause of temperance at heart, was yesterday traveling up and down Michigan.

WHITE SOAP. The Laundry or Toilet is EQUAL to White Castile Soap. It is made of PURE VEGETABLE OILS.

REMOVAL of Wholesale Jewelry House. Our large and increasing business demands more room, and we will, after April 1, 1874, occupy all the store of the old building.

New Firm. HOMES FOR ALL. SHOE STORE, SOLOMON UHL, Cherry Pectoral.

SOLE LEATHER, MOROCCO, CALF SKINS, KIPPS AND LINING SKINS. Shoe Findings.

SOLOMON UHL. Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass. GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP.

HERALD OFFICE. Sewing Machine FOR SALE CHEAP. LIST OF CAUSES FIRST WEEK.

A Good Chance for the Right Man. A FARM FOR SALE.

TIME TABLE. BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. PITTSBURGH DIVISION. On and after February 15, 1874, trains on this line will depart from and arrive at depot on the West and Water Streets, as follows:

MAIL TRAINS DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY. Magnificent Day Car through to Washington and Baltimore, with extra baggage space.

ANY ARTICLE UNDER FOUR POUNDS. WIND AND WATER PROOF. Goodyear's Rubber Currier Co.

LEGAL NOTICE. To Sarah Spieker (widow), Christian Spieker, now deceased, leaving three children, Harry Spieker, Lewis Spieker, Sarah Spieker.

NOTICE. Having this day purchased from J. W. Patton the mercantile business, I am prepared to continue the mercantile business by carrying on a general stock, and most especially in the line of hardware.

LEGAL NOTICE. To Sarah Spieker (widow), Christian Spieker, now deceased, leaving three children, Harry Spieker, Lewis Spieker, Sarah Spieker.

LEGAL NOTICE. To Sarah Spieker (widow), Christian Spieker, now deceased, leaving three children, Harry Spieker, Lewis Spieker, Sarah Spieker.

LEGAL NOTICE. To Sarah Spieker (widow), Christian Spieker, now deceased, leaving three children, Harry Spieker, Lewis Spieker, Sarah Spieker.

LEGAL NOTICE. To Sarah Spieker (widow), Christian Spieker, now deceased, leaving three children, Harry Spieker, Lewis Spieker, Sarah Spieker.

LEGAL NOTICE. To Sarah Spieker (widow), Christian Spieker, now deceased, leaving three children, Harry Spieker, Lewis Spieker, Sarah Spieker.