One morning, especially, there her farewell to go West to seek his seemed to be something unusual go-fortune. She had letters from him ing on; the buzzing and bumming was until he arrived in Omaha, when fairly deafening.

Whir-r-r! whir-r-r! What was wore into weeks, the weeks into that great creature that darted past years, but still no word from the abweather or the gentlest of zephyrs.
The morning of our visit exemplified this; the heavens were as lead in color, and a brisk breeze was blowing off the lend. Notwithstanding this, the proprietor courteously insisted upon sending up a couple of his magnetic proprietor. The garden was waited and watched all in vain. His friends gave him up for dead, but she, with a woman's persistency, refused to think so, and declared her belief that he would sometime return to claim his bride.
