

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT: JAMES A. GARFIELD, of Ohio.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT: CHESTER A. ARTHUR, New York.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

FOR SUPREME JUDGE: HENRY GREEN, Northampton Co.

FOR AUDITOR GENERAL: JOHN A. LEMOX, Blair County.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

FOR ASSEMBLY: A. J. COLBOHN, Somerset Bor.

SAM MIER, Elklick Twp.

FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY: GEORGE R. SCULL, Somerset Bor.

FOR PROBATION DIRECTOR: ALEX. KORNS, Jenner Twp.

FOR COUNTY SURVEYOR: WILLIAM M. BAKER, Milford Tp.

SECRETARY SHERMAN is confident Ohio will go Republican this fall and thinks Indiana will do the same.

UNCLE JAKE ZIEGLER, editor of the Butler Eagle, has been nominated for the State Senate by the Democrats of that county.

The Democratic Messenger published at Fremont, Ohio, and hitherto one of the rankest Democratic organs in the State has hoisted the Garfield flag.

The President has appointed W. A. Stone, Esq., of Pittsburgh, U. S. Attorney for the Western District of this State, in place of H. H. McCormick, Esq., whose term of office had expired.

WOULD it be wise or just to place the government in the hands of the men who fought against Hancock at Gettysburg? Yet this is precisely what the Democrats are now asking the country to do.

The sale of postage stamps, stamped envelopes and postal cards by the Department last year, footed up to $61,932,599, being an increase of nearly three and a half million dollars over the preceding year.

The Democrats are boasting largely over Hancock's fighting at Gettysburg. It is well enough to remember that not a single Republican was in the ranks of the army he there helped to defeat.

JUDGE BLACK telegraphs from London to the editor of the New York Herald that he is not the author of General Hancock's letter or orders concerning Louisiana. No one ever thought that the Judge would claim the paternity of them.

The Pension Office has now on file work enough to employ its present force for thirteen years. As the rule of "first come first served" is ordinarily observed, the prospect ahead for pensioners is not as bright as it might be.

COLONEL CHARLES C. JONES made a hit at the Democratic ratification meeting at Augusta, Ga. He said: "If called upon to name one who approached more nearly our fearless leader, Robert E. Lee, than man would be General Hancock."

The Democratic party cannot hide its deformities by skulking behind its Union General. It tried that experiment with General McClellan, and again with Horace Greeley, and the people looked behind the leaders and saw the grinning skeleton of treason.

ENGLISH, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, gloried in wearing a copperhead (penny) as a charm on his watch chain during the war, and was never known to contribute a cent to a citizens' effort in aid of the Government or comfort of the Union soldiers during the entire struggle.

This is the way the Democratic campaign is to be managed in Mississippi. The Star of that State, says:

"Inaugurate social ostracism against every white man North and South that gives support to the building up of the Republican party; discountenance any man who will go on or assist in making the bond of any man elected on the Republican ticket; refuse to have dealings of any sort with the Republican party, and show to the world that you are in truth and in deed a true Democrat."

At the close of 1862, when General Garfield moved his forces upon General Humphrey Marshall at Paintsville, Ky., he took off his coat and flung it high in the air, and, dashing into the thick of the battle cried out, "Go in boys; give 'em Hail Columbia."

That is a good battle cry now. Republicans, give 'em Hail Columbia. SENATOR DOX CAMERON'S health, says a Washington dispatch to the Cincinnati Commercial, is so much undermined as to cause his friends serious apprehension, and only an entire abstinence from all excitement or mental strain, he is advised, will assure his restoration. He is taking sulphur baths and medicine regularly, and is utterly unable to do anything requiring the least strain upon his nervous system.

So Hancock was ready to use the army to seat Tilden in the Presidential chair if the old epiphor had been plucky enough to take the official oath as it was threatened at the time he would do. We understand now why the Brigadiers so fiercely denounced the old man's cowardice.

JUDGE LYMAN TRUMBULL, a former Republican U. S. Senator, is the Democratic nominee for Governor of Illinois. To assist him in his canvass the Republican papers are publishing this extract from a speech made by him a few years since:

"The Democratic party has never yet done an act that would commend it to the favorable consideration of the people of the United States, but, on the contrary, its traditions and its acts are now, and ever have been, a standing menace to the progress and civilization of the nineteenth century."—Lyman Trumbull.

The Richmond (Va.) Commonwealth accepted Hancock, but at the same time says: "We have seen evidences of a disposition to parade before our people the times and places when General Hancock, in command of the Federal forces, overthrew the Confederate forces. Our people have no hankering for crow, however it may be dished."

The members of the Republican campaign have resolved upon vigorous work in the South. The right of free speech and an honest ballot is to be thoroughly tested, and the fact ascertained if possible, whether the South is solid from choice or through the persuasive voice of the shogun.

The redoubtable "Ben" Butler has "skipped out" and left the Massachusetts Democracy, in the hands of his friends. Simmons his first lieutenant has joined the Republicans and is working for Garfield, while other leaders of the Butler Democracy are uniting with the Republicans.

The Pittsburgh Dispatch that has been pushed into circulation in this county as a staunch Republican journal, advises the Greenbackers and Democrats of Allegheny county to unite against Russell Errett, the Republican nominee for Congress, who was nominated without opposition. That kind of Republicanism can be found anywhere in the Democratic ranks.

MR. DAVID A. WELLS, the leading free-trade champion of the country, is delighted with Hancock's nomination and announces his intention of voting for him first, last and all the time. Those who believe in protecting American industry and enabling American workmen to earn a good day's wages for a good day's work, will please take notice.

As a speech made by Congressman Kelley in Philadelphia last week he put the issue tersely, as follows: "The battle of a soldier against a soldier and a statesman; a soldier on a free-trade platform against a soldier and protectionist. The contest is one that interests every man who works for wages, and every man whose capital is embarked in the various industrial enterprises of this State."

JUDGE BLACK made a speech on the 4th of July in Paris. His subject was the "American Union, one and inseparable," and his remarks are reported to have been full of "political erudition." Time was, when the Judge did not have much faith in the indivisibility of the Union, and loudly lamented that he had no country. We are glad to know that his confidence in the Union "one and indivisible" is restored.

Why did Congressman Hubbard, of Texas, say, "We are a solid South, thank God?" We know they are solid, but it was the shogun and his snake who, at the night riders and bulldozers that made it so. A renewed exodus of colored people from the South in case a Democrat is elected President will prove the truth of our assertion.

South Carolina, Florida, Alabama and the English capitalist who own the store, or who conducts the exchange, takes out of this man the price of three barrels of flour more or three suits of clothes more or the cloth to make the exchange by which the cloth is taken from England to Iowa, and the Iowa cloth is taken from Iowa to England. The laborer in England and Ireland, the farmer in the northwest, gets but one-quarter of his own product for himself and pays out three-quarters to those middle-men who make the exchange. Now the Republican tariff says to the English capitalist and manufacturer: "If you want to exchange your cloth for a barrel of flour of the American farmer, if you want to make clothes for us, come over here and make them; settle yourselves down by the gates of the farm-house, establish your factory and manufacture, who banks the wheat and the grain and the beef, grow, and save the product of your labor on the one hand and the product of your farm on the other, wholly for yourselves. [Applause.] And that is the tariff doctrine of the Republican party."

The Tow-Path Boy's Career. LET EVERY YOUNG AMERICAN LOOK AT IT AND VOTE FOR JAMES A. GARFIELD.

At 14 he was at work at a carpenter's bench. At 15 he was a boatman on the Ohio canal. At 18 he was studying in the Chester, Ohio, seminary. At 21 he was teaching in one of Ohio's common schools, pushing forward with his own studies at the same time. At 23 he entered Williams College. At 26 he graduated from Williams with the highest honors of his class. At 27 he was a tutor at Hiram College, Ohio. At 28 he was principal of Hiram College. At 29 he was a member of the Ohio Senate—the youngest member of that body. At 31 he was Colonel of the 42d Ohio regiment. At 31 he was placed in command of a brigade, raised the 9th and 10th regiments of Ohio, and helped General Bull in his fight at Pittsburgh Landing, played a prominent part in the siege of Corinth and in the important movement along the Memphis and Charleston railroads. At 32 he was appointed chief of staff of the Army of the Cumberland, participated in the campaign in Middle Tennessee and in the notable battle of Chickamauga, and was promoted to the rank of Major General.

At 33 he was in Congress, the success of John A. King since? At 48, having been continuously in Congress since he was 23, he was elected to the United States Senate. At 49 he was nominated for the Presidency of the United States.

The Philadelphia "Press" in Reply to Forney. Hancock cannot be sustained upon the mere ground that he was a soldier and fought his sword on the Peninsula or rode along the lines at Gettysburg. He must be supported and defended, if defended at all, as a Democrat and as a candidate of the Democratic party. To this task you now address yourself. You tell us that you intend to attempt to make Hancock a "sin." How long since? Have you for twenty years drawn your glittering blade against Democracy without believing it wrong and dangerous? Has it changed its character in the twinkling of an eye by putting on the mask of shoulder-much as you may respect him, neither stalwart nor Republicans of any shade, but you for Hancock? They know if elected by the Democratic party, his sense of honor will as his own inclinations will cause him to comply with Democratic exactions and follow the Democratic programme to the end. Knowing well what the Democratic programme is, every Republican will vote against the man whose election will mark the inauguration of a policy antagonized by all the ablest and most patriotic leaders. Failing to get the full strength of the Democrats, and getting no strength at all from even disaffected Republicans, General Hancock will fall far short of success as did McClellan and Greeley. Democratic policy as had in the year 1862, 1863, and the Republicans will stand by Garfield as they stood by Lincoln and Grant.

Why Garfield Will Win.

While both the political parties have good candidates, under whose administration, if elected to the Presidency, the Republic would suffer from the relation of the States to the country with its unbroken front it will inevitably array a solid north against it. "A solid south is a solid obstruction to friendship and love"—true, indeed, but who makes it solid? It would be a most extraordinary result, if, upon the election of Hancock, the Republican party should strengthen this solid obstruction by rewarding it with full success. In conclusion, we congratulate you, Colonel, that you will not be called upon when too late to mourn such a calamity. The danger, if there was any, has passed. The time for Hancock is over. When the recruits are mustered they are numbered on the fingers. The people are thinking, and their sober, second thought is unflinching. Pennsylvania is safe and so is the Union.

A Shower of Lightning.

Our Geneva correspondent writes under date of June 29: "A remarkable phenomenon occurred at Warren on the afternoon of Thursday last. Heavy masses of rain clouds hid from view the mountains which their summits were from time to time lit up with vivid flashes of lightning, and a heavy thunder was heard, rattling in the valleys of the Avars and the Allaz. No rain was falling near the lake, and the storm still appeared as if, through a tremendous glare of thunder, the houses of Cleans and Tavel to their foundations. The cherry trees near the cemetery, measuring a metre in circumference, were struck by lightning. Some people who were working in a vineyard near the cemetery, were struck by lightning, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend in the direction of the cemetery, and it was reported that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it ran from point to point of the iron railing of a vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the little girl, the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers appear to have been injured. The vine-dressers were literally drenched in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers fled in terror from the spot. In the cemetery six persons, separated into three groups, and fifty paces of the cherry trees, were enveloped in a luminous light. They were being struck in the face with hailstones of fine gravel, and when they touched each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger-ends. At the same time a column of