The Republican Congressional Committee estimates the next Congress as 148 Republicans, 157 Democrats, 5 Greenbacks, 3 Independents.

Among the Independents Mr. Smith, of Brooklyn, is counted, but he says he will vote with the Republicans. Two Greenbacks from Missouri and one from Pennsylvania were elected by Republican votes, and are generally conceded to the majority.

Iowa, with its majority for Garfield and Arthur of 85,000, is the banner State in the conquering Republican army. This is a greater majority than any State has ever given before to any candidate, being five thousand votes more than the plurality New York gave Fremont in 1856.

As the Republican majority in Iowa four years ago was only 50,000, the attempt of the British and Democratic free-traders to convert the farmers to their way of thinking does not appear to have been a signal success.

The Cooperstown (N. Y.) Freeman's Journal, a Democratic paper having a good character to sustain, says that the talk of some of the Democratic managers of rejecting the Garfield and Arthur votes in this State is more "hush."

We held an election, it says "and got beaten. The Republicans of this State had the most money, the shrewdest management, the best cards—especially the tariff one—they got the most votes, and that is the end of the matter."

and, under oath, testified as to the identity of the man and the letter, in the most explicit and circumstantial manner.

This man, who appeared here as Lindsay, was sent by William M. Price, one of the Hancock Electors for the State of Maryland, and was recognized by Robert Lindsay, now existing. It is unlikely that a man answering to that name ever made any affidavit concerning the so-called Chinese letter. The man who swore in court that his name was Robert Lindsay, and that he knew H. L. Morley, and that he saw in Morley's possession the so-called Chinese letter, now confesses that he swore falsely; that he never knew Morley, never saw the Chinese letter, except in the forged letter which he never saw in Morley's possession, and that he never saw the letter which he swore he saw in Morley's possession, and that he never saw the letter which he swore he saw in Morley's possession.

It is not surprising that the Democratic National Committee, in company with the persons engaged in printing the sheet in which the forged letter first appeared, will manage to secure two false witnesses, by whose perjured testimony it was intended to verify the existence of H. L. Morley and the genuineness of the letter alleged to have been written to him. These witnesses were confronted by the Democratic National Committee, and they broke down abjectly, exhibited their real character as false witnesses, and finally confessed their crimes. With great promptness, the attorneys who had led them washed their hands of the matter, and the Democratic National Committee is able to do so much? Does Mr. Barman, who boasts that he has circulated hundreds of thousands of copies of a forged letter, have anything to say for himself and in explanation of his conduct? He says he was hoped and believed by Barman, his colleagues, and his constituents, that the matter would be closed out after election. The election is over, and the Democratic party is greeted with the humiliating spectacle of a man who has been a candidate for the National Committee perjured himself.

Non that the election of Garfield and Arthur had been secured, the matter of next greatest importance to Pennsylvania Republicans is the choice of a U. S. Senator to succeed Hon. William A. Wallace. For this last nine months Hon. Galesha A. Grist has been the only gentleman whose name has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for this position, and he has been making an open and honorable canvass for the nomination and has secured by previous instruction, about fifty votes to start with. Since the political complexion of the next Legislature has been definitely settled, the names of quite a number of prominent Republicans have been brought to the front as candidates, and among others is that of Hon. John C. Cassin, of Bedford. The indubitable labors of Mr. Cassin as Chairman of the State Central Committee during the late canvass, his splendid power as an organizer, and the magnificent results accomplished thereby, entitle him to high recognition at the hands of the Republicans of the State, and we observe with pleasure a general disposition to concede him the fullest credit and suitably reward him therefor.

In point of fitness for the position of Senator, Mr. Cassin will compare favorably with any of the gentlemen who have been mentioned in connection with the office. A member of the largest ability, a parliamentarian unexcelled in the State, a fluent speaker and ready debater, an experienced legislator well versed in State and National affairs, a stalwart Republican and a gentleman of unimpaired personal and public character, he would most fully and ably represent this great Commonwealth in the Senate of the United States.

Locality should not exclusively govern in the selection of this important representative of the State's interests in the highest council chamber of the nation; yet locality should be taken into consideration in making the choice. Almost a matter of right, Pennsylvania, east of the Susquehanna, claims one of the Senators, and the immense interests of the State west of that river, together with its magnificent Republican vote, ought to be conceded the other, especially when so fitting a candidate as Mr. Cassin is offered for the position.

There is ample time in the future to discuss this matter, and we content ourselves for the present by thus placing our opinion on record. We append hereto an editorial article, expressing the honest view of Mr. Cassin's candidacy.

The war-horse chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, after cleaning up the rubbish and sweeping the rooms (his own lingo) in the Quaker City headquarters, has made up for the Quaker City, Bedford to rest his feet in the Ohio, and is now in the hands of the old Republican ship Pennsylvania through storms and raging seas, and in the last run, he has been overtaken by a party which came to the rescue of the ship—Indiana's landing on the other side of the river, solid South and Dixie domination.

It is not to show what appearance the Indiana boatmen received Mr. Cassin's aid in the hands of the canoe in the Hoosier state in the election election we subjoin several telegrams from Chairman John C. New to his friends which explain themselves:

Chairman Cassin's Congratulatory Address.

Chairman Cassin, of the Pennsylvania State Central Committee, last night issued the following address:

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE, PHILADELPHIA, Pa., November 8, 1880.

It affords me much pleasure to be able to congratulate you on the great victory you achieved on last Tuesday. No party has ever won in the history of this country for many years has been fraught with more serious and vital consequences to the whole people of our State and of the nation than the one just ended. United the interests of the whole Commonwealth, and what is more significant, as well as gratifying to our people, is the fact that it has been demonstrated not only that Pennsylvania, but that the nation is in favor of a protective policy.

This question became one of the chief issues of the canvass in this State, and it was the result of the numbers of forty thousand, and have secured a very large majority on joint ballot in the Legislature, insuring the election of a United States Senator. You have made a great victory for the people of the State, and have done much to encourage and aid our fellow-Republicans in the other States of the Union in achieving the triumph over which all rejoice today.

In Berks, Anderson, Union, Harry, Chester, Hamilton, Burlington, Orangeburg, and Colleton Counties, many polling precincts at which Republican majorities were anticipated were never opened, and various outrages of the character already named were perpetrated. Several precincts were also kept closed in this county, and, especially in this city, the most infamous frauds were unblushingly committed. At the Hope Engine house the Democratic managers drew out a total of over 2000 votes from the ballot boxes, and the poll list was falsified. This was also done at other precincts, though to a less extent. At other places the poll lists of the other managers exceeded those kept by the Supervisors many hundreds of votes, and the Democratic managers to account for the fraudulent Democratic returns, were also kept closed in this county, and, especially in this city, the most infamous frauds were unblushingly committed.
