

WAS IT A DREAM?

A PERSONAL REMINISCENCE. On the 26th of August, 1862, I was in the Union army...

On the 26th of August, 1862, I was in the Union army, and the regiment to which I belonged was sent to fight as skirmishers...

After a while, however, I wandered into a dreamland where all seemed strange. I fancied myself lying in a line of battle...

I could also perceive the puffs of smoke from the rifles of the enemy's sharpshooters and hear the reports of their firearms...

I found that, as a personal matter, the injuries were quite serious—a missile ball having penetrated my throat, passing by my lungs...

It was the hottest place I was ever in, and hotter than I hope for in the future. The losses were very heavy, more than half my comrades being either killed or wounded...

Speaking of hot places in a battle, one does not—cannot—understand fully what they are until he is struck down on the field...

At this point I was awakened from my slumber, and learned the time to be about 2 p. m., of August 29. Having my dream as I considered it, in my mind, I made inquiries and ascertained that during my nap nothing had remained unusually quiet...

I must really confess that the realistic character of my excogitations during sleep affected me considerably, and all the more because the scenery depicted was altogether strange.

The old battle-field of Bull Run was reached early in the forenoon, and about 12 m. we were advanced a mile or so to the northward, where we were assigned our position in the line of battle then forming.

On our left the country was open, but in the opposite direction, beginning at a distance of some three hundred yards from our right, the timber extended up to and beyond the ridge already described.

Opening of the Trial of Jeanne Darc.

After preliminaries that threatened to be endless, the public part of the trial began on Wednesday, February 21, 1431, at eight in the morning...

At ten o'clock the Bishop presided, and of the sixty ecclesiastics present, three authorized reporters were in their places, and there were some other clerks, concealed by a curtain...

The prisoner was brought in, freed from her chains, and was allowed to go to the toilet in a small chamber, and so did the trial order in the proceedings.

We charged aloud and reached the hill. The enemy's gunners fired. The crest was almost gained, as we (for at least one of the many) fell asleep almost immediately after the arrangements for the night had been perfected...

But to continue: So soon after falling as possible, I constituted myself a board of survey to assess the damages sustained, and forthwith entered upon the investigation.

I do not know," said she, "upon what you wish to question me. Perhaps you will ask me things which I ought not to tell you."

The bishop urged her again and again to take the oath without objection. She refused and they were at length obliged to yield the point and accept a limited oath.

"I shall not say it," was the reply, "unless in confession." "Hear me in confession, and I will say it for you willingly."

"I do not accept such an injunction," she replied. "If ever I escape from you, I will never again go to confession."

She was then removed to her chamber, and the court broke up. The next morning at eight, in the robing-room of the chateau—a large apartment near the great drawing-room—the court again convened...

VETERINARY.

On Saturday, June 11th, we received the following dispatch from Peter Heffley, of Highland Farm; My Clydesdale horse is sick with lung fever...

With the opening of my spring movements in the agricultural line comes the cow. Laramie has about seven cows that annoy me a good deal...

It was a lovely night. At the head of the procession there was a seal-brown cow, with a tall like the handle of a pump, and standing at an angle of forty-five degrees.

By and by there was a crash, and the seal-brown cow went home carrying the garden gate with her as a kind of keepest. She had plenty of garden gates at home in her collection...

When the bright May morn was ushered in upon the busy world, the radish and squash bed had melted into chaos, and there only remained some sticks of stove wood and the tracks of a cow...

Yesterday morning it was very cold, and when I went out to feed my royal self-acting hen, I found this same cow wedged into the hen coop.

"I do not know," said she, "upon what you wish to question me. Perhaps you will ask me things which I ought not to tell you."

The superstitious in regard to horse shoes is supposed to be of Celtic origin. In early times among the Celts the race an elfy of the patron saint, was much used in the dwellings and workshops of the people...

Nothing so takes the concern out of a man as to order his paper discontinued and then see the editor going along and getting rich without him.

When the money you are in the habit of giving to the poor like a newly-born babe? Bet cause its precious little.

There are some men who are so talkative that nothing can hold their jaws.

I had Neuralgia and Palpitation of the heart. Peruna cured me.

WHY DOES A WOMAN LOOK OLD SOONER THAN A MAN?

Who is it that is first interested in a young man's looks? A woman, I suppose. She looks at him from the moment he enters the room, and he looks at her from the moment she enters the room.
