SORROW IN FOREIGN LANDS.

came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive, but every man in his own order. As the seed must first be buried in the earth, so must we be buried in death. And as the seed from the earth brings forth fruit, so shall we be raised up, and shall never again see corruption. Christ the first fruit, afterward they that are Christ's at His coming. Then cometh the end. When He shall have delivered up the kingdom of God, even the Father, when He shall have put all rule and all authority and power for ever under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. But as man shall say, How are the dead raised up? And with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not that body that shall be, but bare grain. It may chance of wheat or of some other grain, but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased Him, and unto every seed his own body. And there are also celestial bodies and bodies terrestrial, but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars, each differing from another in glory.

lay aside all that is mortal and all that remains of our beloved brother in the silent grave, it may be with the blessed hope of the resurrection. And the resurrection we shall see forever with the Lord. Guide us by Thy counsel, afterwards receive us to Thy throne, and glory; we ask it through Christ, the Lord. Amen." At this point the Vocal Society sang, "To Thee, O Lord, I yield my Spirit."

ADDRESS OF REV. ISAAC ERRETT.
Rev. Isaac Errett, of Cincinnati, delivered an eloquent address, taking for his text the following: "And the resurrection we shall see forever with the Lord. Guide us by Thy counsel, afterwards receive us to Thy throne, and glory; we ask it through Christ, the Lord. Amen." At this point the Vocal Society sang, "To Thee, O Lord, I yield my Spirit."

life, qualified with the dignities and privileges of citizenship. The great lesson to which I desire to point you can be expressed in a few words. James A. Garfield was elected to the highest public office in our country, and by so doing he was raised to a position of the greatest responsibility. He was called to a position of the greatest responsibility, and he was called to a position of the greatest responsibility, and he was called to a position of the greatest responsibility.

strength and prosperity and power beyond anything the world has ever known. But let me say that the performance of the work and its continued enlargement must depend upon our maintaining virtue as well as intelligence, and making dominant in all the lands those principles of pure morality that Jesus Christ has taught us. Just as we cling to that we are safe, and just as we forget and depart from that we proceed toward disaster and ruin. And this, when we see that has been accomplished in a mighty life like this, an instance of the power of truth and right, which spreads from heart to heart and from life to life and from State to State, and equally from nation to nation, until these pure principles reign everywhere, God shall realize His great purpose so long ago expressed to us in the words of prophecy, that the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, so that then over the dead body of James A. Garfield may all the people join hands and swear by the Eternal God that they will dismiss all unworthy purposes and love and worship only the true and right God, and that they will follow the grand principles that Jesus Christ has taught us, to realize the grand ends of the high civilization to which His words of truth and right continually point us.

FAVORITE HYMNS,
which were beautifully sung by the Vocal Society, as follows:
Ho, ye reapers of life's harvest,
Why stand with rusted blades,
Until the night dawns round thee,
The harvest moon is full and clear,
Why stand ye idle, waiting,
For reapers more to come?
The golden morn is passing,
Why sit ye idle, dumb,
Thrust in your sharpened blades,
And gather in the grain:
The night is fast approaching,
And soon will come the dawn,
The Master calls for reapers,
Should He call in vain?
Shall slaves be thus ungathered,
And waste upon the plain?
Mount up the heights of wisdom,
And crush each error low,
Keep back no words of knowledge,
The world must know,
Be faithful to thy mission,
In service of Thy Lord,
And then a golden harvest
Shall be Thy first reward.

THE SIX MILES OF EUCLID AVENUE
through which the procession marched were draped and appropriately decorated. The designs were varied and handsomely and tastefully arranged. In the center of the line of march were the caissons of the late President hung in front of many of the handsome mansions along the avenue, draped with the National colors, entwined with heavy black crepe, relieved by festoons of white. In the laws in front of a large number of the caissons, flags had been erected. Broken shafts surrounded with wreaths of white roses festooned with smilax, massive crosses, sheet anchors, harps and crowns were seen on every hand, elaborately decorated with evergreens and flowers. The caisson in front of the caisson was draped with the national colors, and on the side of the caisson were the caisson of the late President and the caisson of the late Mrs. Garfield, and on the side of the caisson were the caisson of the late President and the caisson of the late Mrs. Garfield.
