"THE HEART OF A MAN."

BY ALICE TURNER. In the grim hush of midnight

When your house has grown so still, I rise from my sleep in the churchyard To wander about at my will. I pass your unopened door softly

And stand once more by your side. Till you dream that in heaven I love you, As well as the day I died.

As my feet go down your stairway. Out into the darkness grim.

And back to the yawning churchyard I go with the rising wind-But a sudden whisper holds me Though I dare not look behind.

"Think, you, poor ghost, he loved you, That you hasten to watch his rest, When his heart was young he loved me, I was his first and best, In the land of death be will claim me-
