

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

STATE TICKET. GOVERNOR, JAMES A. BEAVER, Centre county.

SECRETARY OF INTERNAL AFFAIRS, JOHN M. GREER, Butler county.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, WILLIAM T. DAVIES, Bradford county.

FOR CONGRESSMAN AT-LARGE, MARRIOTT BROSIUS, Lancaster county.

JUDICIARY TICKET. JUSTICE OF SUPREME COURT, WILLIAM HENRY RAWLE, Philadelphia.

COUNTY TICKET. CONGRESS, JACOB M. CAMPBELL, Cambria county.

STATE SENATOR, JACOB H. LONGENECKER, Bedford county.

ASSEMBLY, WILLIAM S. MORGAN, Jenner township.

ANDREW J. COLBORN, Somerset borough.

POOR HOUSE DIRECTOR, JESSE HOOVER, Milford township.

JURY COMMISSIONER, CHARLES F. RAYMAN, Brothersvalley township.

The Republican State of Ohio, has been fooled away by divisions in the Republican ranks on the whisky question.

News from Dakota says that the immense wheat crop of that country has been largely damaged by the late excessive rains.

Hon. F. M. KIMMEL, of Chambersburg, Pa. on Thursday last, nominated as the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Franklin-Huntingdon district.

In the loss of Ohio, by divisions in the party, the Republicans of Pennsylvania can see the fate that awaits them, if they hearken to the destructive teachings of the Independents.

FREE RUM and no Sunday, were the issues on which the Democrats carried Ohio last week by a majority of over 10,000. That the Democrats of this State are in unison with their friends in Ohio, is shown by the extreme delight with which the news is received.

The question troubling the public just now, is this: Was Senator Grof's defeat brought about by the treachery of Boss Crofford, who first betrayed Uhl for Grof, and then betrayed Grof for Reynolds? Or was the Boss groined, and in consequence, Grof went under with him?

EVERY workman in the State of Pennsylvania who votes the Democratic ticket this fall will vote against a protective tariff and in favor of a "tariff for revenue only." Can the laboring classes vote for a party that, if successful, would legislate them out of employment? If not, do not vote for the Democracy.

To see the rosters and elephants in the Democratic papers, crowing and cavorting over the Democratic victory in Ohio, must make the Independents feel good, as they are doing their best by dividing the Republican party in this State, to give their Democratic allies the same chance to crow over the result in Pennsylvania.

THE zeal with which General Crofford is taking up the Independent cause, is not calculated to aid it much in the estimation of thinking and sinner men. It is corroborative evidence of the bargain and sale by which he is to receive Independent votes, in return for Democratic support of the Independent candidates for the Legislature.

REPUBLICANS who forget the memory of the murdered Garfield are asked to honor it by defeating the party which conferred upon him the highest trust in its gift, and turning over the State government to the party which called him a thief and perjurer, forged the Moore letter and pasted the walls with "329" placards, and whose organs have pursued his memory with a deadly malignity beyond the grave. If General Garfield were alive he would hardly appreciate that sort of honor.

THE Democratic stool-pigeons who are endeavoring to destroy the Republican organization in this county by advocating the Independent heresy, are at the same time running a muck against the HERALD, their pet phrase being "that dirty lying sheet." When these fellows were begging office at the hands of the Republicans of this County, they were very solicitous to have the support of the HERALD, and but few, if any of them, would have succeeded without its support.

But, fire away, gentlemen, the HERALD will survive many a long day after you are tucked away in your little beds.

Do our friends in this county note the very great quiet with which the Democrats are carrying on their campaign? Not a single meeting do they hold. The Independents are doing their work for them. They hold the meetings and denounce the Republican party, and the Democrats attend them all, and do the howling. When, if ever before, did our people see the Democrats attending so-called Republican meetings?

As a set-off to the loss of eight Congressmen in Ohio, we gained two in West Virginia last week, which, with the one heretofore gained in Maine, reduces our total loss to five. With an earnest effort we can hold all our present members in Pennsylvania and New York, and these, with the further gains that we will have in the Western States, by reason of their increased representation, will enable the Republicans to control the next Congress. Stand up, General Campbell. All is not lost that is in danger.

It must be not only surprising but amusing to the people of this county, to listen to the solicitations of Kooztz, Koozer & Co., to support the Independent, and vote against the regular ticket, when they remember how many times and oft, these same orators have besought them to "stick to the ticket," "vote the ticket, the whole ticket, and nothing but the ticket," particularly when they were candidates, as one or the other of them has been, time out of mind. By the time the election is over these gentlemen will discover that, although they were elected, change, principles do not.

"BEAVER and the whole ticket," should be the watchword of every true Republican. By this sign we have always won, and we can do it now, over the combined forces of the Democracy and their Independent allies. Remember how often the renegades who are now battling in the cause of our old enemy, have besought you to "stick to the ticket." The advice was good, if the Devil gave it. Stand by your guns, Republicans! We must not only beat, but utterly rout the deserters, who are trying to show the enemy the way into our camp. Treason was never less odious than it is to-day.

THE Independents are directing their heaviest efforts to the defeat of A. J. Colborn, Esq. "Tray, Blanche, Sweetheart and little dogs all," are in full chorus on his trail, and the "Thunderer," published at Meyersdale, vociferously predicts his defeat by thousands of votes. Mr. Colborn and his colleague on the ticket, Mr. Morgan, cannot be defeated by noise, bluster and denunciation. They were regularly and honestly nominated upon them at Independent meetings, is as harmless as the idle winds. The Republicans of Somerset County are now, viper-like, attempting to sting the hand that fed them.

THE immense Republican meetings lately held in Philadelphia show that the old camp-fires are burning brightly, and they have awakened the Democrats for carry that Republican stronghold for Governor, because he had been elected Comptroller of that city by Republican votes.

In their alarm they have put Patton on the stump, and he is now traveling throughout the State, reciting pretty little platitudes to tickle the ears of the voters. The young man lacks the discretion of an old politician that have him in training, and occasionally blurs out facts that if shared, he would have kept to himself.

For instance, in a speech made to the people of Towanda, in which he took up the cry of the Independents, he held against Bossism as lustily as the most blatant Blaine-froed could do, and used the following language: "To-day we storm the heights of Bossism, storm by column with the Independents, for the overthrow of a combination of men who have been felt, not only in Pennsylvania, but throughout the country, to the destruction of every Independent sentiment that should characterize a free people."

Of course we are sorry to lose Ohio, but the loss was not totally unexpected. The Democrats and the liquor men were united in favor of free whisky and against the law compelling observance of the Sabbath, while the Republicans were divided: the distinctive temperance man acting as assistant Democrats, by voting for a separate temperance ticket, instead of standing by the party that was fighting their battle. The loss of eight Republican members of Congress is the sorest blow, as thereby the Republican majority in Congress is endangered and the tariff interests of the whole country put in jeopardy.

The result on Pennsylvania Republicans is not disheartening, as the Democrats hoped it would be, but has had just the contrary effect. The people see the result of divisions in the party, which are kept alive by a few selfish leaders; they know that there are no differences upon any question of public policy, that the quarrel in the Republican family is founded only on the disappointed ambition of a few men, and they have determined to let the leaders fight it out if they please, but that the State shall not be lost as Ohio was, if they can help it, and every day we hear of persons supposed to be wrong, who are falling into line for Beaver and the whole ticket.

The instincts of the Republican masses are right; with Ohio as a warning, they are coming, and they will come, and all the sophistry of the demagogues, who are laboring to lead them astray, will not induce them to further lead their aid without its support.

But, fire away, gentlemen, the HERALD will survive many a long day after you are tucked away in your little beds.

loss of eight Republican members of Congress in Ohio, has started the protective tariff men of this State, and they now see that the only salvation for our manufacturers and laborers, is in sending Republican protectionists to Congress. We must carry every Republican candidate in this State, if we want to have protection for our industries continued, and already the changes in favor of the Republicans are telling on the enemy. The Republicans of Pennsylvania can no longer be deceived by the babble of the Independents, that the tariff is not an issue in this State.

CANDIDATE STEWART says: "We make no fight on local offices. Where candidates for Congress and Legislature have been fairly nominated, the Independent Republicans will give them their support, provided said nominees are not pronounced in their determination to support Cameron and the 'bosses.'"

The Independents of Somerset County are giving the lie to their candidate's fine speeches. They cannot say that Colborn and Morgan were not fairly nominated, and as Cameron is not a candidate and cannot be during their term of office, they cannot support him, and yet, they are doing their level best to defeat them.

REPUBLICANS who desire to see continued protection to American labor and industry, and to have Somerset County placed in Congressional and Senatorial districts where their sentiments will be respected, and their political views carried out, should not fail to vote for Campbell for Congress, and Longenecker for Senator.

Remember that the vote of one Congressman may turn the scale in the next House, for or against protection, and that if Somerset County is placed in Democratic districts by the next Legislature, there she is bound to remain for the next ten years. Vote for your own interests, Republicans, and you will surely do this by voting for Campbell and Longenecker.

Those who remember how Cowan, of this State, Trumbull, of Illinois, and Doolittle, of Wisconsin, all three intellectual giants in the Senate during Lincoln's Administration, kicked against the party, got outside the organization, and finally landed in the Democratic party, where they sank into utter insignificance; and those who look upon that miserable, despised wreck, Andrew G. Curtin, once the admired and beloved "great Governor" of Pennsylvania, now a mistreated and powerless Democratic member of Congress, can form some idea of the fate in store for such renegades as Kooztz, Koozer and others, who, petted and feasted, and fed fat on Republican patronage, are now, viper-like, attempting to sting the hand that fed them.

THE immense Republican meetings lately held in Philadelphia show that the old camp-fires are burning brightly, and they have awakened the Democrats for carry that Republican stronghold for Governor, because he had been elected Comptroller of that city by Republican votes.

In their alarm they have put Patton on the stump, and he is now traveling throughout the State, reciting pretty little platitudes to tickle the ears of the voters. The young man lacks the discretion of an old politician that have him in training, and occasionally blurs out facts that if shared, he would have kept to himself.

For instance, in a speech made to the people of Towanda, in which he took up the cry of the Independents, he held against Bossism as lustily as the most blatant Blaine-froed could do, and used the following language: "To-day we storm the heights of Bossism, storm by column with the Independents, for the overthrow of a combination of men who have been felt, not only in Pennsylvania, but throughout the country, to the destruction of every Independent sentiment that should characterize a free people."

Of course we are sorry to lose Ohio, but the loss was not totally unexpected. The Democrats and the liquor men were united in favor of free whisky and against the law compelling observance of the Sabbath, while the Republicans were divided: the distinctive temperance man acting as assistant Democrats, by voting for a separate temperance ticket, instead of standing by the party that was fighting their battle. The loss of eight Republican members of Congress is the sorest blow, as thereby the Republican majority in Congress is endangered and the tariff interests of the whole country put in jeopardy.

The result on Pennsylvania Republicans is not disheartening, as the Democrats hoped it would be, but has had just the contrary effect. The people see the result of divisions in the party, which are kept alive by a few selfish leaders; they know that there are no differences upon any question of public policy, that the quarrel in the Republican family is founded only on the disappointed ambition of a few men, and they have determined to let the leaders fight it out if they please, but that the State shall not be lost as Ohio was, if they can help it, and every day we hear of persons supposed to be wrong, who are falling into line for Beaver and the whole ticket.

The instincts of the Republican masses are right; with Ohio as a warning, they are coming, and they will come, and all the sophistry of the demagogues, who are laboring to lead them astray, will not induce them to further lead their aid without its support.

But, fire away, gentlemen, the HERALD will survive many a long day after you are tucked away in your little beds.

Chairman Hensel, of the Democratic State Committee, and in the course of conversation remarked that the Democrats were not making as aggressive a fight in this campaign as had been expected. "No," smilingly remarked Mr. Hensel, "in one sense we are not, and yet we have a lot of very able speakers on the stump, who are doing yeoman service for the Democracy." The gentleman expressed surprise, when Mr. Hensel added: "Where could we get a lot of more able or more effective campaigners than Messrs. Stewart, Merrick, Marshall, Kooztz, Wolfe, McMichael and Carson? They are doing more for Patton and the rest of the ticket than any number of Democrats could. They can reach Republicans and take votes from Beaver; Democratic speakers could reach only those who are right; Republicans are fighting the Democratic battle this year, and we need only look after the details of the campaign."

THE Republicans of the Bedford, Somerset, and Fulton Senatorial Districts, in making an excellent and popular nomination in the Hon. J. H. Longenecker, of Bedford, Mr. Longenecker has served in the House with high credit, and men like him are needed very much just at this time in the Pennsylvania Senate. It is not to be wondered at, that the Republicans ought to be thankful for his election—Philadelphia Record (Dem.)

Whether a candidate for Congress be a Stalwart or an Independent, if a pronounced Republican, it does not matter. He may prefer Stewart for Senator, or contrary to the wishes of Republicans who use their common sense will not make either preference an issue at the polls. Republicans are sent to Congress to maintain the policy of the party intact—not to adjudicate between contending divisions in the party.

It is something so childish and absurd in this effort to carry local quarrels into national matters that we are scant patience to discuss it all. It is about as if a voter should call upon a candidate for Congress and ask: "Do you think we should have a disunion war? Will you vote for anybody who will not take my view of Jones?" About three-quarters of an indifferent man might go to a candidate for Congress and threaten him with the loss of a vote in his personal quarrel with a Democrat, or a personal quarrel with a full-grown man would do anything so puerile, especially when like or dislike of Jones was not an issue in Congress. Republicans will act wisely if they confine local quarrels to Pennsylvania, and act in the most national questions—North American.

Garfield Blaine Republicans. The friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.

THE friends of James G. Blaine, in Pennsylvania, claim that they compose a large majority of the Republican party of the State, and that if Blaine were elected, he would have the support of Pennsylvania. It is a mistake to suppose that the Republican nominee, at Chicago, in 1880. Suppose that is true, for the sake of the argument, if the State did not go for Blaine, at Chicago, it did not go for Blaine, in 1880. The third mate, who was Blaine's choice after himself. Every sensible man in Pennsylvania knows that the electoral vote of the State would not have been cast for Garfield, if the Stalwart Republicans had not heartily supported him. In November, 1880, the Stalwart Republicans, who were the majority in Pennsylvania, stood "the heat and burden" of the fight in Pennsylvania in 1880. General Beaver, although he did not get his choice in the nomination for President, at Chicago, went into the political arena, and was elected, and he was supporting his first choice for President. No man in the State did more effective work in favor of Garfield's election than Gen. Beaver did. Now what are the Garfield-Blaine Republicans going to do for General Beaver, for the man who was the majority in Pennsylvania, and who was supporting his first choice for President.