THE BAD BOY.
"There, you drop that," said the grocery man to the bad boy, as he came limping into the store and began to tumble around a box of strawberries. "I have never kicked at you eating my codfish and cod bones and cheese and herrings and apples, but there has got to be a dividing line somewhere, and I make it on strawberries at four shillings a box and only two layers in a box. I only bought one box, hoping that some plumber or gas man would come along and buy it, and by gum, everybody has been in this store has sampled a strawberry out of that box, and shivered as though it was sour, and gone off without asking the price, and the grocery man looked mad, and took the hatchet and knocked in a barrel of apples, and said, 'There help yourself to dried apples.'"
"O, I don't want your strawberries or dried apples," said the boy, as he leaned against the show-case and looked at a bar of red transparent soap. "I was only trying to look you up, Mr. Sny, the soap is old enough to eat. I remember seeing it in the show-case when I was about a year old and pa came in here with me and held me up to the show-case to look at them tin tobacco-boxes, and that round zinc looking glass, and the yellow wooden pocket comb, and the soap looked just the same, only a little faded. If you would wash yourself once in a while your soap wouldn't dry up on your hands, and the boy sat down in the chair without any back, feeling that it was even with the grocery man.
"The boy never minded, however, as it is paid for, and that is more than your father can say about the soap that has been used about his house the past month. 'But we won't quarrel. What I heard about a band serenade told them to wait a minute and he had a baby at the house had hired a band and were coming in a few minutes to serenade him, and he better prepare to make a speech. Pa is proud of being a father at his age, and he thought it was no more than right for his neighbors to serenade him. He went to loading himself for a speech, in the library, and me and my chum went out and told the leader of the band there was a family up there that wanted to have some music, and they didn't care for expenses, so they quit blowing their brains out. You'd a dide to see pa, English except the leader, and he only understood enough to take a drink when he invited. My chum steered the band up to our house and got them to play 'Habes on our Block,' and 'Baby Mine,' and I stopped the men going home and told them to wait a minute and they would see some fun; so when the band got through the second time, and they were emptying the beer out of their horns, and pa stepped out on the porch there were more than a hundred people in front of the house. Captain Lovewell, an Indian fighter of his region, came upon the Indians asleep around a pond, he and his men killed and scalped them all, and entered Dover, New Hampshire, bearing the ten scalps stretched on hoops and elevated on poles. After receiving an oration from the Indians, he went by water to Boston, and were paid a thousand pounds for their scalps. Yet Lovewell's party was always accompanied by a chaplain, and had prayers every morning and evening.
The most painful aspect of the whole affair was the fact that the boy had been in the band that couldn't understand English, they looked at each other, and wondered what it was all about, and finally pa wound up by stating that it was very kind of the boys and their children of his own, and then he invited the band and the crowd in to take some refreshments. Well, you ought to have seen the band come into the house! They fell over each other getting in, and the crowd went home leaving pa and my chum and the two boys. Even now I should smile. They just reached for things and talked Bohemian. Drink? O, no I guess they didn't pour it down. Pa opened a dozen bottles of champagne, and they fairly bathed in it as though they had a sore inside. Pa tried to write but he couldn't understand, finally they got full and started out, and the leader asked pa for $3, and that broke him up. Pa told the leader that he supposed the gentleman who had got up the serenade had paid for the music, and the leader pointed to me and said, 'You are the gentleman that got it up.' Pa said him, but he had a wicked look in his eye, and me and my chum lit out, and the Bohemians come down the street boiling full, with their horns on their arms, talking Bohemian for all that was out of them. They stopped in front of a vacant house and began to play, but you couldn't tell what tune it was, they were so full, and a policeman came along and drove them home. I guess I will sleep at the livery stable to-night, 'cause pa is awful unreasonable when anything costs him $3, besides the champagne."

A WOMAN'S TONGUE.
I have heard of a man, who concocted a plan to bride a woman's tongue; But he made such a mess, That he died in distress, And has gone to his rest unsung. He had measured the length, But mistaken the strength; And these are the facts, my friends: It was part of the plot, To tie in a knot, The rapidly moving ends. An unfortunate crank, To encounter the plan, Proposed his wife for the fun; He thought it would end As a joke on his friend, But the circus had scarce begun. As he stood in the door Of his wife's boudoir, With a cord in his evil hand, He thought of the man, Who had made such a mess, And it was about In a way that was fiercely grand. Then his friends ran in, As a glorious end, Arose on the morning air; But the king of the plan, Was a tall man, And the wound was plain to be seen. He floored our ingenious friend, And before he could rise, He was struck in the eye, And killed by the other end. MORAL. You may venture at ease, As you wish, to do wrong; For you may tie old or young; But whatever the strife, If you value your life, Keep away from a woman's tongue. —Philadelphia Press.

A CRUEL BLOW.
"The most dangerous and troublesome man," said Dr. Redfield, "are those who should be regarded as fools, but for some unexplained reason are not. Here is a beautiful and lovely young woman suddenly deprived of reason just on the eve of her marriage to the worthy young man on whom she has been in love with three hundred miles away, and who has been sent to an asylum for each alternate year of the remainder of his life."
These remarks related to a practical joke played by a reckless and audacious young man, one Fred Loshier, the victim of his criminal folly being his cousin, Florence Percival, whose marriage would have taken place the next day.
The railway train which was bringing her prospective husband from his home, three hundred miles away, was behind time about five hours, delayed by a heavy storm, which had also prostrated the telegraph lines, so that no information in regard to the cause of the detention could be obtained.
The train came in at last, however, at eight, and without having sustained any serious accident. The bride groom elect, Frank McAllister, alighted from the cars, going first to the hotel, from whence, in half an hour, he would have reported himself at the residence of his betrothed.
That foolish cousin, however, had been sent to the station to obtain the earliest news of the delayed train, came rushing back to the house to bring the tidings, but he thought it would be a capital joke, as he afterwards said, to give his cousin at first a good scare.
"Well, Florence," he exclaimed, "Frank has been heard from at last. The train's smashed—forty persons killed—and he among them!"
A bewildered, half-conscious look was followed by a fearful scream, and poor Florence had fallen unconscious.
Dr. Redfield, the family physician who chanced to be passing the door, was immediately with the patient, and doing his utmost to arrest the progress of those terrible convulsions, but with scarcely any success.

TUTT'S PILLS
A NOTED DIVINE SAYS:
"I have been a sufferer from indigestion, flatulence, and other ailments, and have found that your pills are the only ones that have done me any good."
