An. Mrs. Co. Gentlemen: "I intended writing you somer but I wished to cell my fruit first, and I fell much indebted to your company for my success in this business. I saved my entire crop of down apples, which dropped from the trees on account of the great heat not wind of one week, and which would have been a total loss, as apples were so planty here. I evaporated on my No. 2.355 bushels of apples, which made 2.250 peands of evaporated fruit, which I sold here at 1455 cents per pound, making $255.73. Total expense of operating, licending making steplate, and incidentals, $125.55. I have the Evaporator as good as new, and have called it the "King" of all evaporators. I am indebted to the American for this achievement, and for doing for the fruit growers of Missouri so much. I am perfectly satisfied with my success.
