. An Anacdote of Sumner.

Charles Sumner, many years before he was known in politics, sought the acquaintance of Horace Greeley in New York. He found the journalist much engaged, and was invit-ed by him to come to his house the next morning and take breakfast. Mr. Summer was not an early riser, and he liked a good breakfast when he did get up. He rather anticipated one in this case. At the early hour named by Mr. Greeley he left the Astor house, took a stage, and rode several miles up Broadway, and after much difficulty, found the WHOLE NO. 1705. residence of his new friend at an idfashioned farmhouse, situated in the middle of an orchard between Broadway and the river, where he

Miss Susan Aramantha Sears

Did love and woo a comely lad.

But all despite her plaints and tears,

A most distressing time she had ;

She did not suit her lover's dad.

The old man locked his lovely boy

Which did the gentle youth annoy

Within a dark and lonesome room

And plunged his soul indismal gloom

Which by the gods of war, he swore

Likewise retard Miss Sears's boom.

The old man bought a pair of shoes,

He would for dreadful purpose use

But late one night Miss Susan crept

And while the father soundly slept

And as she sweetly played and sang

And sang a dulcet serenade.

Untidden to the festive scene,

A buildog of ferocious mein !

The sight of that ferocious brute

Yet, to relieve you of suspense.

Miss Susan Aramantha Sears

Without a bustle now appears.

Made Aramantha Sears turn pale,

She, shricking, fled; he gave pursuit :
