A BUNCH OF LETTERS.

They are tied with a faded blue ribbon That begins to give token of age, And a musty-like odor arises As I turn over each closely-penned page. And I sit with my feet to the fire, And read from beginning to end, Will "My dearest," "My fondest," 'truest Fade away to "Forever your friend."

That tell of a passionate heart ; They are brimming with words of affection And a fragrance of love from the start ; Each sentence seems laden with perfume Each line as if set in a frame,

And the words at the end of each letter

eem the dearest that mortal could name. I read of slow walks in the moonlight, hat seemed by the kindness of Fate, Of tete-a-tetes on the veranda, If lingering adieus at the gate;

Of hints, only hints, of soft kisses, That were far too seraphic to last; Of suggestions of treasured caresses In those joy sceptered days of the past. But I carelessly ponder them over, And I quietly gaze in the fire,

And all the sweet words I've been reading Cap arouse no sweet tunes to my lyre, And my heart at that past-time affection Has not stirred since the reading began; For the whole precious series of missives clong to another man.
