

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

STATE.

FOR STATE TREASURER, MATTHEWS S. QUAY, of Beaver County.

COUNTY.

FOR POOR HOUSE DIRECTOR, JOHN C. BARRON, of Somerset Township.

FOR JURY COMMISSIONER, IRWIN G. CUSTER, of Somerset Township.

THE PLATFORM adopted at Harrisburg is long, but it is "mighty good reading" for all intelligent Republicans.

QUAY HAD VOTES enough to nominate him on first ballot without Philadelphia. So far once that city didn't "rule the roost."

IN THE CONVENTION last week Messrs. Sanner and Adams voted for Col. Quay, and W. B. Frazer, Esq., for Hon. J. H. Longenecker.

AT THE State Teachers' Convention at Harrisburg last week, a resolution was unanimously passed pledging abstention from the use of tobacco.

THE PRESIDENT is going to take to the woods in a few days. He thinks he can stand the gnats and mosquitoes better than he can the office seeking bees.

FOR ALL practical purposes, Col. Quay's nomination was unanimous before a ballot was taken. This proves how heartily and thoroughly the party is united.

THERE are not many political caucuses among Republican office holders, and therefore the President has but little trouble in "spotting" "offensive partisans."

THE CONVENTION concluded last week that the party couldn't have a better Chairman of the State Committee than Senator Cooper, and therefore he was again elected.

THE ESTIMATED Philadelphia Press mournfully but decorously falls in at the tail of the procession. It has discovered that it was mistaken when fancying it was at the head.

THURSDAY LAST was the hottest day of the year. The thermometer reached the nineties in many places. Deaths from sunstroke are reported from numerous points throughout the country.

JUDGING from the tone of the Republican journals all over the State, the nomination of Col. Quay is being gratified with such unanimity by the people, as it was made by the delegates.

THE "old machine" must have been well oiled to make it give Quay 1961 votes out of a total of 250. Perhaps the growers and kickers will, for once, admit that the people, not the machine did it.

AT THE State Convention last week Capt. M. R. Adams, of this County, was made one of the Vice Presidents; Capt. W. H. Sanner was a member of the platform committee, and J. R. Scott, Esq., was appointed a member of the State Committee.

SECRETARY LAMAR, who ordered the U. S. flag to be placed at half-mast when the traitor Jeff Thompson died, neglected to have it raised on the 4th inst. At Salt Lake the Mormons placed the National colors at half-mast in derision of the day.

THE EDITOR of the Philadelphia Press bankers after crowd, judging from the pertinacity with which he seeks that kind of diet. The convention last week furnished him with an ample supply to last the balance of the season.

GOVERNOR PATTON is amusing himself this hot weather by vetoing a large portion of the bills sent to him during the last days of the Legislature. The most trifling excuse for kicking the dollar is greedily seized by his Excellency.

THE National flag was not hoisted over the Interior Department or the Department of Justice in Washington, on the 4th of July. Both the cabinet officers presiding over these departments were rebel brigadiers, and presumably thus indicated their contempt for the National Anniversary.

SENATOR LONGENECKER was not nominated last week, but he ran the gauntlet of the State press without a harsh or unkind word being said against him, outside of this County. He was simply unfortunate in taking the field after Quay had a good start, and in being backed by the Philadelphia Press with offensive, dictatorial, bulldozing methods.

THE State Convention resolved last week that hereafter these assemblies shall be held during the last week in August, except in years when candidates for President and Governor are to be nominated. This will shorten the campaign in "off years," and avoid the sweltering heat usually felt in the early days of July, when the State Capital is like a fiery furnace seven times heated.

OWING to the swarms of office seekers that consume so much of the time that he would otherwise devote to business affairs, the President has been constrained to give notice that hereafter on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays he will see only the officers of his cabinet

CANDIDATE QUAY.

NOMINATED ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

Nearly Two Hundred Votes Cast for Him and the Nominations then Made Unanimous.

DETAILS OF THE CONVENTION.

HARRISBURG, July 8.—The proceedings of the Republican State Convention were unaccompanied by the usual brass band. The hall of the House where the delegates assembled is small and can accommodate no ornamental features. The weather was very hot, too, and the delegates had to be carefully assigned numbered seats and had little difficulty in finding them. Many removed their coats, lit cigars and cooked their feet upon the desks. When the convention was called to order at 10:30 and unusual number of new faces appeared—men who have not generally been seen at State Conventions. The Philadelphia Press were seated together at the left of the main aisle and every man answered to his name except McManes, who appeared soon after.

The roll call developed but one contest that of the Seventh district of Lackawanna, where both delegates were finally admitted. As soon as the roll was finished General Frank Reeder nominated William B. Rogers, of Allegheny, for temporary chairman. There was no opposition. Chairman Cooper named James McManes of Philadelphia, and A. W. Leisenring, of Carbon, to conduct Mr. Rodgers to the chair. As Mr. McManes was not in the hall General Reeder took his place. The speech of Chairman Rodgers was brief. He spoke merely in congratulation of the harmony which now exists in the party. Secretaries named were J. P. Fetter, of Philadelphia; Harrah, of Beaver; Beck, of Lackawanna; Francis, of Tioga, and Landis, of Lancaster. Then followed the naming of the customary committees on resolutions, credentials, permanent organization and rules. This is the most tedious process of the proceedings. It takes the better part of an hour to go through with it and in a hot hall people haven't any too much patience with it. While it was going on more people took off their coats and about two-thirds of the delegates were working fans or straw hats with great vigor.

GETTING THROUGH THE PRELIMINARIES.

When the committees had been completed, Mr. Rodgers passed a resolution that the nomination of candidates be proceeded with at once. This was done to facilitate business. It was agreed to very readily by the sweltering crowd. After the adoption of the rule Cessna objected, but without avail. At this point Senator Emery got in an anti-discrimination resolution, and there was a resolution to change the basis of representation in the State Convention and apportion it according to the Republican vote. These went to the committee on platform. Having adopted an order to go on with nominations the convention proceeded to call the counties for members of the State Committee. Here and there a delegate now drifting out after beer and drifting back again after a reasonable interval. Matters became dull—so dull that when a resolution of sympathy for Grant was offered it could scarcely be passed, as it should have been feeling, regardless of the rules. The Chair in an indignant sort of way turned it over to the committee on platform.

THE PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

IT WAS NOW 12 o'clock. The committee on permanent organization brought in a report with E. C. Cooper, James S. Biery, of Lehigh, for president of the convention. There was the most comfortable unanimity in the committee and in the vice presidents were distributed lavishly. Mr. Biery congratulated the convention on the admirable material from which it could select candidates for State Treasurer. He dwelt for a time upon party harmony and spoke of the convention as a little apiece by expressing the belief that the candidate nominated to-day would receive the hearty support of every member of the party.

The nomination of Col. Matthew S. Quay by the Republican State Convention last week, was simply a ratification in form, of the choice of the Republicans of this State. Public sentiment pointed so unmistakably to Mr. Quay's nomination, in advance of the Convention, as to leave the delegates but little else to do than register the wishes of their constituents.

In many years there has been no unanimity exhibited in favor of an aspirant for popular favor. All of the rival candidates were gentlemen of great personal worth with irreproachable public and private records, but so great was the esteem in which Mr. Quay is held by the Republican masses, that he received more than three-fourths of the votes of the people's representatives on their first ballot. For years Mr. Quay has been an acknowledged leader in the Republican party, and although holding important and prominent positions of appointment, this is his first appearance as a candidate seeking public support. His conceded ability, his great political sagacity and his high personal character have given him a foremost place in the ranks of his party, and with this "coin of vantage" his nomination was almost an assured fact from the moment he entered the canvass. In turning to a candidate of his well known pronounced views, the Republican party of the State gives evidence of its political rehabilitation, and of its intent to move forward as of old, regardless of the malcontents who have attempted its wreck, because they could not control it. The characteristics which have made Mr. Quay strong with his party, will of course draw upon him the hottest fire of the enemy, but with a nomination so unanimous, and with a reunited party at his back, under his skillful leadership, the result cannot for a moment be considered as doubtful.

THE PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICAN State Convention yesterday defined the living issues of the day as protection to American industries, a revival of our commercial marine, the establishment of a true system of civil service, a free ballot and a fair count, and the preservation of a just financial system. This is capital. Pennsylvania makes a good start for a stirring campaign.—Inter Ocean.

The influence of the Philadelphia Press in Philadelphia politics is shown by the fact that although it fought Quay's nomination for two months with the meanest insinuation, and the foulest Democratic ammunition, there were but four of the forty-six delegates from that city voted against Quay, and it is stated they would not have done so but that they had paper out to Longenecker in connection with the passage of the Bullitt bill by the last Legislature. The Press advocacy is evidently much more injurious than its opposition.—Johnston Tribune.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the most effective blood-purifier ever devised. It is recommended by the best physicians.

CANDIDATE QUAY.

NOMINATED ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

Nearly Two Hundred Votes Cast for Him and the Nominations then Made Unanimous.

DETAILS OF THE CONVENTION.

HARRISBURG, July 8.—The proceedings of the Republican State Convention were unaccompanied by the usual brass band. The hall of the House where the delegates assembled is small and can accommodate no ornamental features. The weather was very hot, too, and the delegates had to be carefully assigned numbered seats and had little difficulty in finding them. Many removed their coats, lit cigars and cooked their feet upon the desks. When the convention was called to order at 10:30 and unusual number of new faces appeared—men who have not generally been seen at State Conventions. The Philadelphia Press were seated together at the left of the main aisle and every man answered to his name except McManes, who appeared soon after.

The roll call developed but one contest that of the Seventh district of Lackawanna, where both delegates were finally admitted. As soon as the roll was finished General Frank Reeder nominated William B. Rogers, of Allegheny, for temporary chairman. There was no opposition. Chairman Cooper named James McManes of Philadelphia, and A. W. Leisenring, of Carbon, to conduct Mr. Rodgers to the chair. As Mr. McManes was not in the hall General Reeder took his place. The speech of Chairman Rodgers was brief. He spoke merely in congratulation of the harmony which now exists in the party. Secretaries named were J. P. Fetter, of Philadelphia; Harrah, of Beaver; Beck, of Lackawanna; Francis, of Tioga, and Landis, of Lancaster. Then followed the naming of the customary committees on resolutions, credentials, permanent organization and rules. This is the most tedious process of the proceedings. It takes the better part of an hour to go through with it and in a hot hall people haven't any too much patience with it. While it was going on more people took off their coats and about two-thirds of the delegates were working fans or straw hats with great vigor.

GETTING THROUGH THE PRELIMINARIES.

When the committees had been completed, Mr. Rodgers passed a resolution that the nomination of candidates be proceeded with at once. This was done to facilitate business. It was agreed to very readily by the sweltering crowd. After the adoption of the rule Cessna objected, but without avail. At this point Senator Emery got in an anti-discrimination resolution, and there was a resolution to change the basis of representation in the State Convention and apportion it according to the Republican vote. These went to the committee on platform. Having adopted an order to go on with nominations the convention proceeded to call the counties for members of the State Committee. Here and there a delegate now drifting out after beer and drifting back again after a reasonable interval. Matters became dull—so dull that when a resolution of sympathy for Grant was offered it could scarcely be passed, as it should have been feeling, regardless of the rules. The Chair in an indignant sort of way turned it over to the committee on platform.

THE PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

IT WAS NOW 12 o'clock. The committee on permanent organization brought in a report with E. C. Cooper, James S. Biery, of Lehigh, for president of the convention. There was the most comfortable unanimity in the committee and in the vice presidents were distributed lavishly. Mr. Biery congratulated the convention on the admirable material from which it could select candidates for State Treasurer. He dwelt for a time upon party harmony and spoke of the convention as a little apiece by expressing the belief that the candidate nominated to-day would receive the hearty support of every member of the party.

The nomination of Col. Matthew S. Quay by the Republican State Convention last week, was simply a ratification in form, of the choice of the Republicans of this State. Public sentiment pointed so unmistakably to Mr. Quay's nomination, in advance of the Convention, as to leave the delegates but little else to do than register the wishes of their constituents.

In many years there has been no unanimity exhibited in favor of an aspirant for popular favor. All of the rival candidates were gentlemen of great personal worth with irreproachable public and private records, but so great was the esteem in which Mr. Quay is held by the Republican masses, that he received more than three-fourths of the votes of the people's representatives on their first ballot. For years Mr. Quay has been an acknowledged leader in the Republican party, and although holding important and prominent positions of appointment, this is his first appearance as a candidate seeking public support. His conceded ability, his great political sagacity and his high personal character have given him a foremost place in the ranks of his party, and with this "coin of vantage" his nomination was almost an assured fact from the moment he entered the canvass. In turning to a candidate of his well known pronounced views, the Republican party of the State gives evidence of its political rehabilitation, and of its intent to move forward as of old, regardless of the malcontents who have attempted its wreck, because they could not control it. The characteristics which have made Mr. Quay strong with his party, will of course draw upon him the hottest fire of the enemy, but with a nomination so unanimous, and with a reunited party at his back, under his skillful leadership, the result cannot for a moment be considered as doubtful.

THE PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICAN State Convention yesterday defined the living issues of the day as protection to American industries, a revival of our commercial marine, the establishment of a true system of civil service, a free ballot and a fair count, and the preservation of a just financial system. This is capital. Pennsylvania makes a good start for a stirring campaign.—Inter Ocean.

The influence of the Philadelphia Press in Philadelphia politics is shown by the fact that although it fought Quay's nomination for two months with the meanest insinuation, and the foulest Democratic ammunition, there were but four of the forty-six delegates from that city voted against Quay, and it is stated they would not have done so but that they had paper out to Longenecker in connection with the passage of the Bullitt bill by the last Legislature. The Press advocacy is evidently much more injurious than its opposition.—Johnston Tribune.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the most effective blood-purifier ever devised. It is recommended by the best physicians.

CANDIDATE QUAY.

NOMINATED ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

Nearly Two Hundred Votes Cast for Him and the Nominations then Made Unanimous.

DETAILS OF THE CONVENTION.

HARRISBURG, July 8.—The proceedings of the Republican State Convention were unaccompanied by the usual brass band. The hall of the House where the delegates assembled is small and can accommodate no ornamental features. The weather was very hot, too, and the delegates had to be carefully assigned numbered seats and had little difficulty in finding them. Many removed their coats, lit cigars and cooked their feet upon the desks. When the convention was called to order at 10:30 and unusual number of new faces appeared—men who have not generally been seen at State Conventions. The Philadelphia Press were seated together at the left of the main aisle and every man answered to his name except McManes, who appeared soon after.

The roll call developed but one contest that of the Seventh district of Lackawanna, where both delegates were finally admitted. As soon as the roll was finished General Frank Reeder nominated William B. Rogers, of Allegheny, for temporary chairman. There was no opposition. Chairman Cooper named James McManes of Philadelphia, and A. W. Leisenring, of Carbon, to conduct Mr. Rodgers to the chair. As Mr. McManes was not in the hall General Reeder took his place. The speech of Chairman Rodgers was brief. He spoke merely in congratulation of the harmony which now exists in the party. Secretaries named were J. P. Fetter, of Philadelphia; Harrah, of Beaver; Beck, of Lackawanna; Francis, of Tioga, and Landis, of Lancaster. Then followed the naming of the customary committees on resolutions, credentials, permanent organization and rules. This is the most tedious process of the proceedings. It takes the better part of an hour to go through with it and in a hot hall people haven't any too much patience with it. While it was going on more people took off their coats and about two-thirds of the delegates were working fans or straw hats with great vigor.

GETTING THROUGH THE PRELIMINARIES.

When the committees had been completed, Mr. Rodgers passed a resolution that the nomination of candidates be proceeded with at once. This was done to facilitate business. It was agreed to very readily by the sweltering crowd. After the adoption of the rule Cessna objected, but without avail. At this point Senator Emery got in an anti-discrimination resolution, and there was a resolution to change the basis of representation in the State Convention and apportion it according to the Republican vote. These went to the committee on platform. Having adopted an order to go on with nominations the convention proceeded to call the counties for members of the State Committee. Here and there a delegate now drifting out after beer and drifting back again after a reasonable interval. Matters became dull—so dull that when a resolution of sympathy for Grant was offered it could scarcely be passed, as it should have been feeling, regardless of the rules. The Chair in an indignant sort of way turned it over to the committee on platform.

THE PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

IT WAS NOW 12 o'clock. The committee on permanent organization brought in a report with E. C. Cooper, James S. Biery, of Lehigh, for president of the convention. There was the most comfortable unanimity in the committee and in the vice presidents were distributed lavishly. Mr. Biery congratulated the convention on the admirable material from which it could select candidates for State Treasurer. He dwelt for a time upon party harmony and spoke of the convention as a little apiece by expressing the belief that the candidate nominated to-day would receive the hearty support of every member of the party.

The nomination of Col. Matthew S. Quay by the Republican State Convention last week, was simply a ratification in form, of the choice of the Republicans of this State. Public sentiment pointed so unmistakably to Mr. Quay's nomination, in advance of the Convention, as to leave the delegates but little else to do than register the wishes of their constituents.

In many years there has been no unanimity exhibited in favor of an aspirant for popular favor. All of the rival candidates were gentlemen of great personal worth with irreproachable public and private records, but so great was the esteem in which Mr. Quay is held by the Republican masses, that he received more than three-fourths of the votes of the people's representatives on their first ballot. For years Mr. Quay has been an acknowledged leader in the Republican party, and although holding important and prominent positions of appointment, this is his first appearance as a candidate seeking public support. His conceded ability, his great political sagacity and his high personal character have given him a foremost place in the ranks of his party, and with this "coin of vantage" his nomination was almost an assured fact from the moment he entered the canvass. In turning to a candidate of his well known pronounced views, the Republican party of the State gives evidence of its political rehabilitation, and of its intent to move forward as of old, regardless of the malcontents who have attempted its wreck, because they could not control it. The characteristics which have made Mr. Quay strong with his party, will of course draw upon him the hottest fire of the enemy, but with a nomination so unanimous, and with a reunited party at his back, under his skillful leadership, the result cannot for a moment be considered as doubtful.

THE PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICAN State Convention yesterday defined the living issues of the day as protection to American industries, a revival of our commercial marine, the establishment of a true system of civil service, a free ballot and a fair count, and the preservation of a just financial system. This is capital. Pennsylvania makes a good start for a stirring campaign.—Inter Ocean.

The influence of the Philadelphia Press in Philadelphia politics is shown by the fact that although it fought Quay's nomination for two months with the meanest insinuation, and the foulest Democratic ammunition, there were but four of the forty-six delegates from that city voted against Quay, and it is stated they would not have done so but that they had paper out to Longenecker in connection with the passage of the Bullitt bill by the last Legislature. The Press advocacy is evidently much more injurious than its opposition.—Johnston Tribune.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the most effective blood-purifier ever devised. It is recommended by the best physicians.

CANDIDATE QUAY.

NOMINATED ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

Nearly Two Hundred Votes Cast for Him and the Nominations then Made Unanimous.

DETAILS OF THE CONVENTION.

HARRISBURG, July 8.—The proceedings of the Republican State Convention were unaccompanied by the usual brass band. The hall of the House where the delegates assembled is small and can accommodate no ornamental features. The weather was very hot, too, and the delegates had to be carefully assigned numbered seats and had little difficulty in finding them. Many removed their coats, lit cigars and cooked their feet upon the desks. When the convention was called to order at 10:30 and unusual number of new faces appeared—men who have not generally been seen at State Conventions. The Philadelphia Press were seated together at the left of the main aisle and every man answered to his name except McManes, who appeared soon after.

The roll call developed but one contest that of the Seventh district of Lackawanna, where both delegates were finally admitted. As soon as the roll was finished General Frank Reeder nominated William B. Rogers, of Allegheny, for temporary chairman. There was no opposition. Chairman Cooper named James McManes of Philadelphia, and A. W. Leisenring, of Carbon, to conduct Mr. Rodgers to the chair. As Mr. McManes was not in the hall General Reeder took his place. The speech of Chairman Rodgers was brief. He spoke merely in congratulation of the harmony which now exists in the party. Secretaries named were J. P. Fetter, of Philadelphia; Harrah, of Beaver; Beck, of Lackawanna; Francis, of Tioga, and Landis, of Lancaster. Then followed the naming of the customary committees on resolutions, credentials, permanent organization and rules. This is the most tedious process of the proceedings. It takes the better part of an hour to go through with it and in a hot hall people haven't any too much patience with it. While it was going on more people took off their coats and about two-thirds of the delegates were working fans or straw hats with great vigor.

GETTING THROUGH THE PRELIMINARIES.

When the committees had been completed, Mr. Rodgers passed a resolution that the nomination of candidates be proceeded with at once. This was done to facilitate business. It was agreed to very readily by the sweltering crowd. After the adoption of the rule Cessna objected, but without avail. At this point Senator Emery got in an anti-discrimination resolution, and there was a resolution to change the basis of representation in the State Convention and apportion it according to the Republican vote. These went to the committee on platform. Having adopted an order to go on with nominations the convention proceeded to call the counties for members of the State Committee. Here and there a delegate now drifting out after beer and drifting back again after a reasonable interval. Matters became dull—so dull that when a resolution of sympathy for Grant was offered it could scarcely be passed, as it should have been feeling, regardless of the rules. The Chair in an indignant sort of way turned it over to the committee on platform.

THE PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

IT WAS NOW 12 o'clock. The committee on permanent organization brought in a report with E. C. Cooper, James S. Biery, of Lehigh, for president of the convention. There was the most comfortable unanimity in the committee and in the vice presidents were distributed lavishly. Mr. Biery congratulated the convention on the admirable material from which it could select candidates for State Treasurer. He dwelt for a time upon party harmony and spoke of the convention as a little apiece by expressing the belief that the candidate nominated to-day would receive the hearty support of every member of the party.

The nomination of Col. Matthew S. Quay by the Republican State Convention last week, was simply a ratification in form, of the choice of the Republicans of this State. Public sentiment pointed so unmistakably to Mr. Quay's nomination, in advance of the Convention, as to leave the delegates but little else to do than register the wishes of their constituents.

In many years there has been no unanimity exhibited in favor of an aspirant for popular favor. All of the rival candidates were gentlemen of great personal worth with irreproachable public and private records, but so great was the esteem in which Mr. Quay is held by the Republican masses, that he received more than three-fourths of the votes of the people's representatives on their first ballot. For years Mr. Quay has been an acknowledged leader in the Republican party, and although holding important and prominent positions of appointment, this is his first appearance as a candidate seeking public support. His conceded ability, his great political sagacity and his high personal character have given him a foremost place in the ranks of his party, and with this "coin of vantage" his nomination was almost an assured fact from the moment he entered the canvass. In turning to a candidate of his well known pronounced views, the Republican party of the State gives evidence of its political rehabilitation, and of its intent to move forward as of old, regardless of the malcontents who have attempted its wreck, because they could not control it. The characteristics which have made Mr. Quay strong with his party, will of course draw upon him the hottest fire of the enemy, but with a nomination so unanimous, and with a reunited party at his back, under his skillful leadership, the result cannot for a moment be considered as doubtful.

THE PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICAN State Convention yesterday defined the living issues of the day as protection to American industries, a revival of our commercial marine, the establishment of a true system of civil service, a free ballot and a fair count, and the preservation of a just financial system. This is capital. Pennsylvania makes a good start for a stirring campaign.—Inter Ocean.

The influence of the Philadelphia Press in Philadelphia politics is shown by the fact that although it fought Quay's nomination for two months with the meanest insinuation, and the foulest Democratic ammunition, there were but four of the forty-six delegates from that city voted against Quay, and it is stated they would not have done so but that they had paper out to Longenecker in connection with the passage of the Bullitt bill by the last Legislature. The Press advocacy is evidently much more injurious than its opposition.—Johnston Tribune.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the most effective blood-purifier ever devised. It is recommended by the best physicians.

GRANT'S TALKS ON PAPER.

Not a Ghost, but a Maniac.

DAVENPORT, O., July 9.—The people in the neighborhood of Milton, a small place about eighteen miles north of this place, have been during the past few weeks terribly exercised over a ghost frequently seen during that time in the neighborhood. It had been seen by different people and all gave the same description of the phantom. Last night it entered the village, when a young man named Furness, armed with a gun, pursued the spectre. He followed it into a dense wood, when he gained on it, and finally saw it was a woman. He went up to her, and to the question "Who are you?" she answered, "Nobody; I died this morning." She said her husband was dead and in hell. The woman had nothing on but a light gown, which was in tatters, while her long, black hair hung down her back in matted bunches. The woman was taken prisoner and upon examination was found to be a raving maniac, who nearly a month ago escaped confinement at Covington. Her name is Babalon and she has been mad for nearly twenty years.

Terrible Scourge in Spain.

LONDON, July 8.—Despatches from Aranjuez, Spain, show that the ravages of cholera in that suburb of Madrid have been dreadful beyond description. The streets are deserted and the population has decreased from 14,000 to 3,000. Those that are left are feeble, and make hardly any attempt to ward off disease. Many who are attacked drop senseless as they are walking about, and expire before aid can reach them. More than one-tenth of the soldiers in the garrison, including six officers, have died within a week. Half of the remainder are in the hospital. Every one of the Sisters of Mercy sent to nurse the cholera patients have caught the plague and are dead.

There are no coffins left in the city to enclose the dead and the few hearsemen are practically useless. The bodies of the victims are left by the roadside, wrapped in blankets, and are gathered in the city dust carts, in which they are taken to the cemeteries and cast into trenches.

A Mob Kills Four Men.

GREENADA, Miss, July 8.—A mob of 150 persons took from the Sheriff yesterday a man named Felix Williams, who had just been sentenced to prison for life for being concerned in the murder of two peddlers. The mob next went to the county jail and brought out Perry McChristian. Both men were taken about a mile and hanged from the same limb. They then started for two other men implicated in the same murder. Williams had confessed, stating that Bartley James and John Campbell had assisted in killing the two peddlers. The mob found James at his house, carried him to Union Church, about ten miles from Grenada, and hanged him to a tree. They then went to Campbell's house. Campbell fired upon the mob, wounding one of them. It is reported, and then made his escape. It was rumored here this afternoon that at day's light this morning the mob overtook Campbell and returned to sender. They then shot him dead.

Will Lose Their Eyes.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 8.—An accident of a peculiarly horrible nature occurred near Harrison yesterday. A Blue Line freight train was derailed and in a car filled with lime were two colored tramps. When the accident occurred the car was overturned and the lime thrown over the tramps. Their screams betrayed their presence, but it took an hour to dig them out, by which time their eyes were fearfully burned and will lose their eyes if not their lives. They were brought to the hospital here.

Arson by a Preacher.

VINCENNES, Ind., July 8.—Stover Zimmerman, a Sullivan county preacher, was to-day indicted by the Grand Jury for arson. It is alleged that Zimmerman set fire to a church because he was not allowed to preach in it.

Chased by Bloodhounds.

SPRINGFIELD, O., July 9.—A man rushed into Justice Bradford's office in South Charleston, and shouted breathlessly, "I want a warrant for a man who has run off with my wife." He was directed to a constable, and accompanied by the officer, hurried into the country. After a long journey the constable was found munching crackers and bologna with a married man named James Tillman, of Clifton, O., with whom she eloped. The pair were marched off to the City Hall, where matters were investigated and a strange story developed.

Another Deadly Pest in Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, July 9.—A bad state of affairs is reported from Greene county. A Courier-Journal special from Greensburg states that near Littleton, that county, George Edwards and his little son, together with Henry King and one Dooley, are barricaded in a barn, armed with Spencer and Winchester rifles, while on the outside is a besieging party, composed of several members of the Dowells family, the Pendleton boys and others. During sharp shooting yesterday Tom Dowell got a rifle shot through his body, which disabled and will perhaps kill him, and one of the Pendletons was shot through the hand and shoulder.

It is another case of factions. The Edwards party have been hemmed up in the barn for two days without food or water and the besieging party swear that they will starve them out and kill them. Dowell's party received reinforcements to-day and now numbers about fifteen men. The officers of the law claim to be powerless, but citizens are agitating the question of banding together and arresting both parties. The situation is reported as most serious and much bloodshed is likely to follow.

The Prohibition Law in Iowa.

DAVENPORT, July 9.—The Democrat this evening publishes letters from the Mayors of twenty-nine of the leading cities and towns in Iowa on the workings of the prohibitory law, which had been in force a year on July 4. The showings made in that time are open saloons in nineteen of the cities, and in a number of places where liquor is sold 916, amounting of 146 during the year.

Try It Yourself.

The proof of the pudding is not in chewing or eating, but in trying yourself. C. N. Boyd the Druggist has a free trial bottle of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup for each one who is afflicted with Coughs, Colds, Consumption or any Lung Affection.

GRANT'S TALKS ON PAPER.

Not a Ghost, but a Maniac.

DAVENPORT, O., July 9.—The people in the neighborhood of Milton, a small place about eighteen miles north of this place, have been during the past few weeks terribly exercised over a ghost frequently seen during that time in the neighborhood. It had been seen by different people and all gave the same description of the phantom. Last night it entered the village, when a young man named Furness, armed with a gun, pursued the spectre. He followed it into a dense wood, when he gained on it, and finally saw it was a woman. He went up to her, and to the question "Who are you?" she answered, "Nobody; I died this morning." She said her husband was dead and in hell. The woman had nothing on but a light gown, which was in tatters, while her long, black hair hung down her back in matted bunches. The woman was taken prisoner and upon examination was found to be a raving maniac, who nearly a month ago escaped confinement at Covington. Her name is Babalon and she has been mad for nearly twenty years.

Terrible Scourge in Spain.

LONDON, July 8.—Despatches from Aranjuez, Spain, show that the ravages of cholera in that suburb of Madrid have been dreadful beyond description. The streets are deserted and the population has decreased from 14,000 to 3,000. Those that are left are feeble, and make hardly any attempt to ward off disease. Many who are attacked drop senseless as they are walking about, and expire before aid can reach them. More than one-tenth of the soldiers in the garrison, including six officers, have died within a week. Half of the remainder are in the hospital. Every one of the Sisters of Mercy sent to nurse the cholera patients have caught the plague and are dead.

There are no coffins left in the city to enclose the dead and the few hearsemen are practically useless. The bodies of the victims are left by the roadside, wrapped in blankets, and are gathered in the city dust carts, in which they are taken to the cemeteries and cast into trenches.

A Mob Kills Four Men.

GREENADA, Miss, July 8.—A mob of 150 persons took from the Sheriff yesterday a man named Felix Williams, who had just been sentenced to prison for life for being concerned in the murder of two peddlers. The mob next went to the county jail and brought out Perry McChristian. Both men were taken about a mile and hanged from the same limb. They then started for two other men implicated in the same murder. Williams had confessed, stating that Bartley James and John Campbell had assisted in killing the two peddlers. The mob found James at his house, carried him to Union Church, about ten miles from Grenada, and hanged him to a tree. They then went to Campbell's house. Campbell fired upon the mob, wounding one of them. It is reported, and then made his escape. It was rumored here this afternoon that at day's light this morning the mob overtook Campbell and returned to sender. They then shot him dead.

Will Lose Their Eyes.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 8.—An accident of a peculiarly horrible nature occurred near Harrison yesterday. A Blue Line freight train was derailed and in a car filled with lime were two colored tramps. When the accident occurred the car was overturned and the lime thrown over the tramps. Their screams betrayed their presence