HOLGER DANSEK.

Ho!ger the Dane who drew a sword. Here in Kensington, close by the sea, Centuries pass, but he never grows old.

MAURIE

Maurie was so handsome, and played so grandly—only the sooner he stopped playing the fiddle.

GOOD EVENING AGAIN, MADAME!

"Good evening again, madame!" he said, addressing her in French. "Madelonelle Lillian requested me to return and look for her fan, which she had dropped; and as it led me toward you, I came willingly."

Next morning it was all arranged

Next morning it was all arranged before breakfast. Mrs. Burt-Robinson, who had, of course, been dragged by Miss Lillian, gave some propitious reason for sending her back.

KOLLER'S AFFAIR.

It has been so many years since a genuine love affair occurred at a watering-place that one between Koller and the French governess was regarded as a sensation.

How a Smuggler Made a Woman a Scapgoat.

"We shall be, my dear madame," said I, "at least, in the presence of the Disappearing Act, my watch, but keeping my eye steadily upon her, we shall be in less than ten minutes at the custom house."
