

HE CALLED AND IT CAME.

He recently played the part of... The dramatic one to him by far... A little maid... Above his head a white star... In cloud effects played...

UNITED.

Miss Priscilla Curtis was forty-five years old, but no one would have known it if she had not frankly confessed to that age, and pleaded guilty to the fact of being an old maid.

She was a pleasant, kind-hearted little body, with a fresh, youthful face, the cheerful laugh imaginable and a smile that won the instant love of everybody.

She had a comfortable income, lived in a cozy cottage, and having nothing else to do, was accomplished and charming. She was a painter of sketches, needle-crazy quilts, and crocheted afghans, hammered brass plaques, and manufactured all sorts of quaint and wonderful articles of household adornment.

It was in reality the face of Mr. William Arnold, and he and Miss Priscilla Curtis had been lovers when he was a young man of twenty and she a girl of seventeen.

Her first visit to this morning was to a neat little house in a back street, which lived Alma Zane, widow of an invalid mother and a half-dozen little brothers and sisters.

Alma was seventeen, rather pretty, and previous to her acquaintance with Miss Priscilla Curtis had worked in a mill, where her earnings were just sufficient to keep a bare roof above their heads.

Alma found ready sale for the product of her deft fingers in the shops, and her two oldest brothers hawked them from door to door in the street.

Alma had a lover—an honest, steady young man, who worked in the mill which she had left, and like her, the sole support of a large family.

John Brainerd was shrewd and intelligent, and seemed determined to rise in the world, although he found it pretty uphill work.

THE OLD SCOUT.

Jim Baker Tells What He Experienced Out West. There is just one man living now that I remember as being here when I first came into this country," said old Jim Baker last evening.

After several attempts Alma was able to make a tolerable fair imitation of a violin, and she resolved to practice all day, and select an assortment of the best for the boys to all to pieces by the bursting of a gun at a U. S. camp.

There was a knock at the door, and Miss Priscilla Curtis could retreat into the adjoining room, the door opened, and a stout, middle-aged man walked in smiling pleasantly.

"Priscilla," he cried at last, and took a step towards her, holding out his arms. "Willie," she cried, and with a sob of joy sprang into his outstretched arms.

"You'll write your Mrs. Wm. Arnold—hey, little woman?" he cried. "I'm sure I'm very glad," said Alma, not knowing what else to say.

"What's that?" cried Mr. Arnold, "so you ought to be. You've made two people just as happy as turtle-doves, and I can't forget that was your object that brought about this meeting."

Well, Mr. William Arnold and Miss Priscilla went away together, and for days thereafter there were busy preparations in the little cottage, and finally a wedding of two people, old in years but young in heart.

It is amusing to observe, and yet the fact is not discrepant to human nature, with what persistency and supreme confidence young fathers and mothers give the world to understand that their own particular little first-born is the most wonderful and beautiful child the world has yet seen.

"Baby was a real beauty and not particularly pretty night, in nainook, lace and cutwork, tucks, white cashmere and soft flannels."

"I hope so," says papa, anxiously. "It feels as though there were a window open somewhere in the car."

"I have been a great sufferer from hay fever for 15 years, and have tried various things without doing any good. I read of the many wonderful cures of Ely's Cream Balm and thought I would try one more."

Having purchased a full set of "TEST Lenses," I am now prepared to fit the most difficult cases. If you have had trouble to get glasses to suit you, come at once and give me a trial.

When Animals Roar.

There is an almost universal belief that the lion roars when he is hungry, and in a wild state in each prey, but the writer ventures to say that, like the bear's roar, the ordinary lion's roar is not an expression of the kind, the idea is altogether erroneous.

There were about eighty men in our party, and we began hunting and trapping beaver over in the Teton basin. This was in '28, and all this country was in Mexican territory then.

"You're right," said the old scout, "I had a good many of them, but I don't know where they are now. I don't know where they are now."

"I don't know where they are now," said the old scout, "I had a good many of them, but I don't know where they are now."

Too Surprising.

A very large lady, a desperate fellow who had often boasted that he could not be whipped, became involved in a quarrel with a small man. Well, after the fight was over, a friend of the desperate man said:

"Y-ah, he tore you all to pieces." "Y-ah." "Mopped up the township with you." "That's what."
