THE SUMMER MAN.

Where life is fair, but men are few He gaily sports, he has his day ; And by the sad sea wave also He is is a much admired beau Until the season factor away. He dresses in the height of style. e's fascination in his smile, He's mulile in the gibby dance

He pienies plans with ready skill. With love-makings he plays at will, But is not hart by Cupid's lance. He wins the good-will of mammas. The dark suspicious of paper He waives away with graceful tact the sings love songs with graceful power,

He always wears a little flower

At archery, to sentile court, He rivels all in the gay sport, But plays so that the fairest wins : And yet, through some most subtle art, The variouslebed belies still take his part And leave him with unpunished sins.

He knows both how to speak and act,

But summer joys, alas | are brief; He's cut down like the tender leaf When blushing Selds grow sadly brown ; Manussand splenstid girls us more Admire him as they did of yore: He's but a dry-goods clerk in town. And all who smiled in sweer July. in dull sentember uses him by : Now he's quite of another clan;
