Royalty and Boston.

Captain Stephen Taylor, of Boston, spent a good deal of time at Honoiulu, setween one voyage and another, and was always treated as a person to whom a great deal of consideration was due. He visited the royal family quite often and was there received by His Majesty. King Kamehameha, who was known as King Aleck by the American and English residents on terms of absolute cound

One day there was a state procession in the streets of Honoluin, and the natives had gathered from all over the Ringdom to do honor to rogalty. Among the crowd and leaning nonchulantly against a tree with a quid in his mouth and his big Panama hat on his head, was Cap. Stephen Taylor, Presently there was a blare of horns down the street, and the head of the royal procession came into view. Off went the headgear of such of the natives as had any headgear, but Can Taylor remained covered, making timber. It tikes little labor to fit these to other movement than to roll his quid to the other cheek. In the workshop broken harness may
