A TRIPLE ALLIANCE

Dora Carmichael was a very pretty girl, Haselrig. whom to see was to admire, and perhaps to love, in most men's opinions. Women did not take precisely this view of her merits ; but then, as we all know, women are notorionaly jealons. Still, even a very pretty girl may be considered as abusing her privileges if she engages herself to more than two men at once. Now this along. was precisely what Miss Carmichael had done, and was not a little perplexed by the consequences of her rashness. Not only had she, unknown to and in disobedience of her people, kept on her engagement with Bertie Haselrig of the artillery but, to please her parents and also her change." own ambition, she had consented a month or two since to accept Mr. Lorimer, son and heir to old Sir James Lorimer. And now, to crown all, a fortnight ago at the Marsdens' hall, Lord Liscarrol had proposed, and she had not been able to refuse him.

Concerning Captain Haselrig she had little anxiety, as he had gone to India on being forbidden the house by Mr. Carmichael, who considered the handsome, imess. But it had taxed even her ingenuity cent affair?"

" And are there many of these trees on the island ?" WILLIAM M. HOCHSTETLEE, SOMERSET, PA. "There are so many that sometimes one sees no other trees for a mile, and very often we take no provision or water when we travel, because we know that we shall find the traveler's tree." "And you say there are other things that they are good for ?" The native answered by asking another question.

"Do you remember," he said, "the village that we passed through this morning, with its wooden huts roofed over with leaves? Those huts were made of nothing but the traveler's tree. The wood splits easily, but makes tough planks for floors, and the walls of the houses are made of bark. "With the branches we make the rafiers, and the leaves cover the roof. But
