PENNSYLVANIA STATE FAIR. A Monster Exhibition to be Held this

The Thirty-third Annual Enhibition of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society will open upon the grounds of the Society in Philadelphia, on Monday, September 5th, and continue for two weeks, closing on Sat urday, September 17th. The circumstances unsler which the State Fair will be held this year are more than usually favorable and no effort or money will be spared to make this exhibition far exceed anything that has over before been seen in the State of Pennsylvania. The annual exhibitions of the Society have always been widely and well known, and have each year brought thousands of people to Philadeiphia to attend them, but it is sale to say that the exhibition which is now belent of the Assembly and University, and ing arranged will be of wider range and greater interest than those of past years. The grounds of the Society are conveni Trustees. The members of the class passed by located in Philadelphia, just at the cro within the Goiden Gate, the little girls in ing of the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia & white scattering flowers in their pathway to Reading Railroads, both of which have stathe Hall of Philosophy, in which structure Rev. Jesse Lyman Huribut, D. D., gave the easy access to the exhibition both from the public recognition. The procession then re- montry and from the centre of the city. A tract of 37 acres of land is included in the grounds giving ample room for thousands of visitors bosides the commodious buildings of the Society. The exhibition buildings themselves are substantial structures, resided with iron, containing 240,000 square feel of floor space for exhibits, and cost over $100, 000. Excellent accommodations are provide ed for the exhibition of horses, cattle, swine sheep, and fowls, and the best of facilities for transportation are offered by the caus railroads, which deliver live stock or merchandles at the grounds, and by Adams Express Company, which has an office on the igroupped.

Every inducement is offered to intending exhibitors of any class of stock, agricultural implements and machinery, or general merchandles, and premiums aggregating over $50,000 are offered for competition. There is may be entered from day State. The press Inui list is arranged upon a basis of great liba fine and fively entertainment in the grand wrality, and offers substantial renumeration to moritorious exhibitors. In addition to the interesting and very extensive exhibition, there will be no lack of mausement provided upon the grounds withfine meetrack upon the grounds, which is now being enlarged to one-half mile. The Church College, Glasgow, and Rev. A. M. more themselves will form one of the contral attractions of the State Fair this year, as the liberal purses which are offered will undoubtedly secure the entry of many wellof fancy races, such as hicycle and tricycle races, etc.

The best hand of music that can be secured will be constantly on the grounds and will furnish an abamhnup of good music. Visitors can be well and champly served with refreshments on the grounds, and every provision will be made for their comfort.

All the railroad lines reaching the city will carry passengers to and from the grounds at greatly reduced rates and excursion trains will probably be run from all important points in Pennsylvania. Those who are
