Five Men Killed.

Bosrox, September 6.-About 10 o'clock this morning a schooner loaded with narchtha was lying near the wharf opposite John Cunningham's great oil storehouse near the Chelsea end of the Chelsea bridge. Four men were on the deck and one below. Suddenly there was a puff of black smoke, and then a tremendous explosion, and a man on the bridge saw the deck of the vessel rise into the air. In the midst of flame and smoke were the bodies of four men. They were hurled high above the schooner and then fell back into the flames. The fifth man jumped overboard and was drowned.

The flames quickly spread to Cunningham's storehouse, which was soon destroyed. Meanwhile the burning hulk drifted around against the drawbridge and burned away the draw. This shut off the Boston Fire Department and prevented their setting to the Chelsea side. The storehouse belonged to John H. Cunningham. It was 150 feet long by 50 wide and is two stories high. It was filled with oil.
