He Struck the Wrong Funeral. Some time ago a Washington journalist was called over to Philadelphia to attend the funeral of a young man whom be had known very well. The journalist reached the city somewhat late, and taking a carriage, hurried away. When he reached the street where the dead man ived a funeral procession was just starting out of it, and thanking his stars that he had not reached the place too late be told his driver to fall into the line of carriages and follow. At the cemetery he out out, aithough he didn't see any one he knew he felt it to be his duty to talk to some one about the deceased, so he approached a nice looking old gentleman. "He was a good fellow," he said, sadly, with a slight nod toward the grave. "Yes," replied the old gentleman, wip-
