

AT GETTYSBURG.

Read at the Camp-Fire of the Grand Army of the Republic, 25th Avenue, Mead Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa., October 18, 1887. Without bow and arrow, and without sword and shield, the soldier listened to the story of My warrior wandering twice around the world, And therein of the strange, the wonderful, And the sublime of every sea and land, A part of my existence, my life, A myriad of memories, Business to the feelings of delight, Intense the passion of my love, and flame the mystic of my dream, Now, with words of glowing and dream, Aton, with glowing and dream, The lightning of my thoughts, Within the storm of my life!

Resting After Meals. "A friend of the writer's, who has suffered from dyspepsia during almost his entire life, considers the suggestion in the following extracts from an article in a recent issue of The Journal of Health to be the most in accord with her own experience of anything on the subject lately published: Hurried eating of meals, followed immediately by some employment that occupies the whole attention and takes up all, or nearly all, of the physical energies, is sure to result in dyspepsia of one form or another. Sometimes it shows itself in excessive irritability, a sure indication that nerve force has been exhausted; the double draught in order to digest the food and carry on the business is more than nature could stand without being thrown out of balance. In another case, the person is exceedingly full as soon as he has a few minutes of leisure. The mind seems a dead blank and can only move in its accustomed channels, and then only when compelled. This, also, is an indication of nervous exhaustion. Others will have decided pains in the stomach, or a sense of weight, as if a heavy burden was inside. Others, again, will be able to eat nothing that will agree with them; everything that is put inside the stomach is made the subject of a violent protest on the part of that organ, and the person suffers untold agonies in consequence. Other suffer from constipation. They may eat all they can and feel hungry still, if they feel satisfied for a little time, the least amount of exertion brings on the hungry feeling, and they can do no more until something is eaten. It is almost needless to say that this condition is not hunger, but inflammation of the stomach. Scarcely any two persons are affected exactly the same way, the disordered condition manifesting itself according to temperament and occupation, employments that call for mental work, and those whose scene of action lies indoors, affecting persons of a more mechanical and do not engage the mind. All, or nearly all, of the difficulties of digestion might have never been known by the sufferers had they left their business behind them, and rested a short time after eating, instead of rushing off to work immediately after hastily swallowed food. Nature does not do two things at a time, and a man, as a rule, All know that when a force is divided it is weakened. If the meal were eaten slowly, without pre-occupation of the mind, the stomach allowed at least half an hour's chance to get its work well turned before the nervous force is turned in another direction, patients suffering from dyspepsia would find relief. A physician once said: "It does not matter what we eat, but how we eat it." While this is only partly true, it certainly is true that the most healthful food hurriedly eaten, and immediately followed by what engages the entire available physical and mental force, is much more than a meal of poor food well leisurely and allowed by an interval of rest. Give Them a Chance. That is to say, your lungs. Also your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger passages, but the thousands of tiny tubes and cavities leading from them. When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well. Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the lung troubles, and you are right. In all of them, all ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Shiloh's German Syrup, which any druggist will send you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain. A Powerful New Pistol. I was recently present at the trials made with a new pistol invented by Mr. Marcus, a distinguished mechanical engineer. In this invention the use of a cartridge is dispensed with, the bullet itself being prepared with an explosive. But, in spite of this explosive nature of the bullet, its shape is not altered by the explosion. The explosion is initiated by a simple mechanism provided in the interior of the pistol. The experiment was made with a single-barrel pistol (the barrel being four centimeters long and its caliber six millimeters). At a range of thirty paces a three-quarter inch wooden board was pierced by the bullet. Then a pistol with a simple acting magazine, containing twelve bullets, was tried, allowing the discharge of forty shots per minute. "The web of life wouldn't be such a tangled web if the whole civilized world would learn—as thousands already know, that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup cures colds and makes sufferers happy. Reasonable Request. Magistrate—You are accused of stealing chickens—Uncle Rastus. Are you guilty or not guilty? "No, your honor. I have no chickens, and I am not guilty of stealing them. I have only a few chickens, and I am not guilty of stealing them. The Leaders in Oregon. J. K. Bolton, Druggist, Ashland, Oregon, writes as follows in regard to the Gilmore Remedies:—"I am very much pleased with your medicines. They give relief to my patients. The Balsam is one of my leaders; the Anemic Wine is a very excellent article; and the Pile Specific and Neuritic Cure are all claim for them. Among the hundreds of remedies for affections of the throat and lungs there is none that equals Gilmore's Magnesia Lotion, Bronchitis, and, etc., it affords instant and gratifying relief. The Gilmore Remedies are for sale by Blawieck & Snyder, Mammoth Block, Somerset, Pa. Favoring the New Version. "Billings had fallen agin." "You don't see it? For how much?" "Twenty-five thousand dollars." "That's the third time, isn't it? He gets richer every time." "Yes, he believes in the old proverb: 'If first you don't succeed, fall again.'"

A Demand on Torpedo Boats. Decidedly the time has come when the torpedo boats must do something, no matter what, to justify their existence. For any powers they have of late shown themselves to be possessed of they are only to be spoken of along with the gallant Hogshead, "a royal salute of bricks" would be a fit recognition of their inactivity. At Toulon recently the torpedo boats failed so badly that even their great patron, Admiral Laube, threw them over; at the recent maneuvers they disabled themselves one after another, like crazy wasps, and yesterday, at the attack upon the fleet in the Solent seems to have been the worst class of all, that of the torpedo boats. The flotilla of twenty boats in a most masterly and scientific manner, so the fault must be in the boats themselves. Yet, says another correspondent, "it seemed to all who watched the fight closely that very few torpedo boats could have passed the outposts so skillfully posted by Lieut. Sledge, and if they had got through they would inevitably have been sunk by fire from the ironclads." And besides those in the action a few ran around for variety's sake, although, says a sarcastic wit, "without suffering any material injury beyond theoretical destruction." As we said before, a torpedo boat must blow up something just to show that she can do it with all the chances in her favor—Pull Mall Gazette. An Important Element Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists. In many localities Hood's Sarsaparilla is in such general demand that it is the recognized family medicine. People write that "the whole neighborhood is taking it," etc. Particularly in the town of Lowell, Mass., where it is made, and where more of Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold than in any other Sarsaparilla or blood purifier. It is the great remedy for debility, scrofula, dyspepsia, biliousness, or any disease caused by impure state or low condition of the blood. Give it a trial. That Hooping Cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. Sold by G. W. Benford & Son. Expensive Death. It is expensive to die in a New York Hotel. A gentleman who had asked for a room not elaborately furnished, explained to a reporter: "If I die in a first-class hotel in this city my estate must pay expenses according to the room in which the undertaker finds my remains. He will provide a mahogany ice-box and a whole conservatory of flowers, and pay for my funeral in a first-class coffin if I am in a ten-dollar-a-day party in a hotel, but if my room gives him a hint that I was a man who practiced reasonable economy his preparations for the arrival of my family will not be so costly. Then, again, the bill that the hotel will present against my estate will not be so large if I die in a room that is plainly furnished as it would be in a pretentious room. It, it may, you know, a practice of the landlords to charge for furnishing the room in which any person dies, and the value of the furniture in that room; for it is assumed to have been destroyed as hotel furniture by a death in the room, and the loss for furnishing in your bill is sometimes as much as $100. A Lengthy Pastorate. The late Rev. H. E. Ewell was the pastor of the Baptist Church at Pavilion, N. Y., for nearly half a century. He was a man of strict honor and integrity and the highest Christian character. His word was as good as a government bond, and he never expressed an opinion that he did not firmly believe. He wrote as follows:—"It affords me great pleasure to recommend to the public, Gilmore's Anemic Wine. I believe it to be the most desirable remedy that can be placed in any family. I am well acquainted with the manufacturers, and have confidence in their ability to do a good thing for suffering humanity. I have used it so long in my family for a number of years with good effect, and firmly believe it will do what is claimed for it. Catarrh cured, and sweet breath secured by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Well, a short time ago I went to look for that river, and all I could see was a lot of fish in a moist place switching their tails around." "Humph! What were they switching their tails for?" "To keep the flies off."—Omanu World. I have been a sufferer from catarrh for the past eight years. Having tried a number of remedies advertised as "sure cures" without obtaining any relief, I had resolved never to take any other patent medicine, when a friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm.
