ONLY A WOMAN AFTER ALL.

I met her at a country place. Where she was spending her vacation. And much admired her form and face. Likewise her sparkling conversation.

THE CASHIER'S STORY.

"I have tried time and again to reason myself out of it. I don't like the idea of going through life acknowledging that I am indebted to the supernatural for my very existence.

Domestic Receipts.

Muffins.—Cream together one cupful of butter and one cupful of sugar; add three eggs and one pint of milk, stirring well; then add one quart of wheat flour, with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

One of Germany's famous military bands will soon make a tour of England. In one week in New York thirty-two dry goods clerks lost their situations because it was ascertained that they frequented pool rooms.

Remedy for Poison Ivy.

People who have sought relief during the heated term of the various aquatic resorts which have been held in New Jersey have suffered at intervals from a plague of mosquitoes and black gnats.

The Leaders in Oregon.

J. K. Bolton, Druggist, Ashland, Oregon, writes as follows in regard to the Gilmore Remedies: "I am very much pleased with your medicines. They give fine satisfaction. The Magnetic Elixir is one of my leaders; the Pile Specific and Neuralgia Cure are also my claim for them.

An Important Element.

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Dollars One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Like Singing, But—

Congregational singing may carry the regard of brotherly love and stately appearance if there is such a thing, but it is sometimes far from entertaining to the person who takes no part in the performance. Recently, at a very fashionable place of religious worship, where many untrained and unaccustomed men riot over persuasive tunes, a man who knew more about the grain market than of "back's heat notes" lifted up his presence.

A Low Price.

Ministers frequently meet with amazement as well as pathetic circumstances in the performance of their parochial duties. The payment of the wedding fee is one of the most trying things to the reverend gentleman's gravity, when it is made by a certain class of men who seem to have no original ideas on the subject.

"Tekel Upharasin."

Logically, the long struggle between the Democratic and the Republican party has been terminated forever by the Democratic victory of 1884, the trial of that party in power and its complete failure to meet the expectations which it caused its success. Not many men, even of the most earnest Republicans, realize how true this is or how important practical results are not always strictly logical.

Women's Fiat Chests.

Every woman will, of course, deny that she lazes. A very eminent lady specialist of New York said, however, a few weeks since that you could not lay the weight of your finger on an exposed vein over her chest.

First, his swagpack. These were indispensable—the market in perfect order within and without; the forty rounds of ammunition in the cartridge-box, supplemented, if there was a probability of soon meeting the enemy, by twenty or forty additional rounds in the knapsack. Second, the rations and utensils. While it can be made of "box" tins, like corned beef, beans, split peas, desiccated vegetables, potatoes, vinegar, molasses, condiments—some of them very, very rarely, others quite as often as their quality made them welcome! If he had received his due share (and who ever knew a "company cook" that had the credit of giving "box" tins, what they were entitled to receive?) of these in addition to the standing marching rations, he had lived quite satisfactorily, so far as his quality was concerned. But the three, or five, or eight-days' rations, which he was supposed to take upon the march in the case of all excursions, and when the weather was fine, he cooked as a rule, very little save the regulation ten "hardtack," a piece of generally excellent salt pork supposed to weigh about twelve ounces, and a spoonful each of dry coffee and sugar for each day's ration. The sugar and coffee were generally mixed, placed in a small bag made for the purpose and stored in the most secure corner of the haversack. Here was the soldier's greatest asset and reliance. The solid food might fail; it often did; but by economy he could always manage to have material for a cup of coffee, and if the march had been hard and the rations scant, the hot beverage with its stimulating effect was so much more grateful. Hung over the haversack, or within it if there is room were the two indispensable culinary articles—the tin cup with the capacity of about a quart and a well blackened tin plate. A knife, a fork and a spoon—frequently the three combined into a single pocket—were generally packed in the outfit in this direction. The canteen which hung beside the haversack was not likely to be filled at the start. Two or three pints of water would make a notable addition to the outfit; it would hardly be needed at the outset; and whether making a few miles there would undoubtedly be a chance to run out of the tank, or to find a well, or some spring or stream and fill the canteen while the march went on.

Last of all there was the knapsack, and its contents varied most of all. What the soldier had of extra clothing was there—it might be a complete outfit, but the chance was that it comprised at the best but a pair of extra socks, a pair of drawers; though there might be an extra coat—perhaps a dress-coat, which was deemed too valuable to be thrown or given away. There were almost invariably writing materials, for every opportunity was taken advantage of to keep the communication with "home" constant. In the case of a soldier, the "at the rear" many a lady line was written to inform the loved ones that the writer had thus far escaped the casualties of war, or to give intelligence of those who had not been so fortunate; carefully cherished mementoes filled some of the corners, a Testament or a pack of cards, and not infrequently both in close companionship. In addition to these articles, there still remained an overcoat to be stored away within the knapsack, the rubber blanket and the woolen one—if the soldier was fortunate to have both—to be rolled and strapped above it, and a section of shelter to be disposed of somewhere. During the summer marches the overcoat was generally thrown away and replaced by a new one when the weather called for it, and it was wonderful how the outfit thus specified would divide if the campaign proved especially trying. Not infrequently the knapsack itself with most of its contents, would be left on the way, the blankets being rolled in a roll and placed over the shoulder, as was the almost universal custom among the confederates.

Words of Wisdom.

We are martyrs to our own faults. To live fast means too often to die fast. Misdirected labor is waste of activity. Nearly all great men have had remarkable memories. All that you know, and you shall learn the truth you need to know. Feebleness of means is, in fact, the feebleness of him that employs them. Call not that man wretched who, whatever his sufferings, has a child to love. Extraordinary afflictions are not always the punishments of extraordinary guilt. False men are not to be taken into confidence, nor fearful men into a post that requires resolution.

Rough on the Judge.

I have just heard the following good story on Chief Justice Healy, says a writer in the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle: "All who know Judge Healy and recall his long way and weary will appreciate the story. Judge Healy was on his way to the Supreme Court one morning when he was accosted by a little street gramin, with an exceedingly dry face, with the customary 'Shine, sir?' He was quite impudent, and the Judge, being impressed with the oppressive uniform, and if any to govern it is too unfit to exist. After it will come some party with his honest convictions and selects honest men to lead it.—New York Tribune.

Remedy For Poison Ivy.

People who have sought relief during the heated term of the various aquatic resorts which have been held in New Jersey have suffered at intervals from a plague of mosquitoes and black gnats. Others, who preferred the mountains and inland attractions, have suffered greatly from contact with poison ivy. The former found a remedy in pennyroyal and brush fires, but many of the poisoned ones got no relief. They were not responded to treatment. As a rule, lime water, butter-milk and oxide of zinc ointment, into which a little white precipitate has been rubbed, will effect a cure. This year it seems as though the poison had to run itself out.

The Leaders in Oregon.

J. K. Bolton, Druggist, Ashland, Oregon, writes as follows in regard to the Gilmore Remedies: "I am very much pleased with your medicines. They give fine satisfaction. The Magnetic Elixir is one of my leaders; the Pile Specific and Neuralgia Cure are also my claim for them. Among the hundreds of remedies for affections of the throat and lungs there is none that equals Gilmore's Magnetic Elixir. In all cases of coughs, colds, hoarseness, bronchitis, asthma, etc., it affords instant and gratifying relief.

An Important Element.

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Dollars One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In many localities Hood's Sarsaparilla is in such general demand that it is the recognized family medicine. People write that the "whole neighborhood is taking it." Especially is this true of Lowell, Mass., where it is made, and where more of Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold than of any other Sarsaparilla or blood purifier. It is the great remedy for debility, scrofula, dyspepsia, biliousness, or any disease caused by impure state or condition of the blood. Give it a trial.
