THE BIG MEAT BILLS

Of Senator Evarts, Pierre Lorillard and James Gordon Bennett, Jr.

I met a fat, jolly looking Irishman in the office of a friend of mine the other day, who impressed me strongly with his heartiness. After he had gone out ! asked my friend who he was.

"You will probably be surprised," returned my friend, " but that man is well known to some of the most prominent men in New York, and has had very intimate dealings with them. Among these may be mentioned Pierre Lorilland James Gordon Bennett, Senator Evarts, and I don't know how many others enough, anyhow, to put him on speaking terms with three-quarters of the men whose names are familiar to every body."

Something in the tone of his voice and in the rather amused smile that accompanied it made me push my inquiries further. The man who was supposed to and nobody used them except ladies of know everybody worth knowing had not the old school, and the combs were the distinguished air usually worn by very small. But the style has been such personages. very capable man. His firm swings a heavy business. Its practice has increased since the principal member retired from President Arthur's Cabinet and since his name came to be mentioned as a possible Presidential candidate. A large share of richly-feed commercial cases which are never tired, but settled by arbitration and out of court, passes through the firm's hands. Mr. Lincoln is a hard worker. He is at his office early and stays late. He frequently walks home to his house on the Lake Shore drive. He belongs to several clubs, but prefers the Chicago, and, beyond joining the coterie of talkers in the smoking room, enters very little into the amusements in vogue in the institution.
