Science in Religion.

Professor Drummond, of Glasgow, is not one of the persons who believes in praying for a clean face. He would rather direct people to seek water and the other appliances which are the human agencies towards a shining countenance. Last Sunday's gathering of the scientists in Columbia College would no doubt have had a larger assemblage, had it been known that such sound common sense would be heard there, as the Scotch true-seeker, Henry Drummond, gave out. "Nothing in religion now comes by miracle. Cause and effect operate just as they do in nature. * * * I am not underrating prayer, but I should like to change the emphasis from effect to cause. Instead of praying for effects, let us pray that we may be enabled to fulfill causes. Joy is an effect as are peace and love. People seem to think that peace and joy and love come down from heaven bodily and in lumps. It is impossible. They come along the line of cause and effect." What seems to have particularly impressed this observer in the American society he has seen is the wearing and restless aspect of the devotional life in this country. He speaks of devout people who are fairly wearing themselves out in the search for sanctification. "Instead of religion being a rest and delight to them it has come to be an everlasting burden. It has come to be a very complicated and difficult, whereas it should be simple and child like." So he advised his hearers to be content with possibilities, and not to pray for finite things; to fix their mind seriously over the causes of content and tranquility, on the sources of upright and honest living, would certainly be great advancement for many. Too often people take hold of temptation by the wrong end. They ask "not to be led" into it, and they go daily to meet, in business, in positions of trust, in the various emergencies of life, with all the causes and sources for yielding to it as unchecked and rampant as ever in their hearts. "If these should pray let me not desire the fast horses, the other 'fast' associates, the display, the extravagance that I cannot afford," that would be a long step towards checking temptation at its source and cause. All the praying in his new-for years back does not check the defaulting cashier or the plundering alderman from betraying his trust or defrauding his employers, because he has never once prayed in earnest to be delivered from the sources of his weakness and from destructive ambition as the earthen pot has for itself among the iron pots. Such a man may indeed have prayed that he may never be drawn to consent to do an infamous thing for money, as he may have petitioned in a futile way not to be allowed to put his hand in the till of to have his fingers stayed from falsifying the books. All the time the original causes are strong as ever within him, leading up to the hour when he will reach out for a bribe or a steal from the trust fund in his charge. He has not prayed for contentment with honest gains taste that are simplified to suit as means for the pride in self-control that sweetens the crust and enlarges the man's happiness in the narrowest home front.

When prayers begin to strike at the causes that guide men's lives, then they accord with natural law. It is, indeed sagacious, with Henry Drummond, not to look out for miracles to be wrought in these days. Steady, sure growth is better with good planting, than any magical outlook searched for of leaves and blossoms, such as the Hindo jugglers show, apparently coming from the plant before our eyes. It is a simple substitution, that bit of magic, of the pot of base earth, for the slow grown plant. The real leaves and blossoms seen have taken their full time to perfect themselves and to push forward into strength their natural number of sunny days and serene nights, of rainy days and rustling breezes. The advent of science into religion is, indeed, as old as the correct understanding of our human nature. But it happens to need from time to time, some such terse putting, such daylight as this Scotchman gave it last Sunday in Columbia College.

Married Woman's Rights.

Judge Thayer recently in squashing a capias for the arrest of a married woman charged with slander, said:

"The rule of the common law, that a married woman cannot be arrested and held to bail in a civil suit for a cause of action arising during the coverture, which William Blackstone denominates 'one of of the many great privileges of English wives,' has always been recognized and maintained as part of the law of Pennsylvania, and has been affirmed by the Supreme Court so recently as 1882, and it is well settled that the rule applied as well to torts as to contracts. It is contended that the Act of June 3d, 1887, had abrogated this privilege of married women. The second section of the act referred to enacts that a married woman shall be capable of entering into and rendering herself liable upon any contract relating to any trade or business in which she may engage, or for necessaries and for the use, enjoyment and improvement of her separate estate, and for suing and being sued, either upon such contracts or for torts, done to or committed by her, in all respects as if she were a feme sole, * * * and any debts, damages and costs recovered against her in any such action, suit or other proceeding, shall be payable out of her separate property, and not otherwise. It is supposed that the works 'in all respects as if she were a feme sole' have destroyed her common law right to exemption from arrest and imprisonment for torts committed during her coverture. Such, however, is not, in our opinion, the effect of the Act of Assembly. It was not, we think, the intention of the Legislature to alter the old rule in this respect. If the Legislature had intended to approve the beneficent principle of the old law which protects a married woman from arrest and imprisonment upon a charge of slander, or any other tort committed during her coverture, they would have said so in plainer terms than these. We will not presume that the Legislature intended to strike down this ancient and well-established privilege, which has always, and from the earliest times, been one of the boasts of our Anglo-Saxon laws and civilization, without more expressive words, or, at least a necessary and unavoidable implication. No such necessary implication lurks in the statute. If it did, the rights which married women have acquired under it would indeed be purchased at a price greatly disproportioned to their value. All that the Legislature intended to say was that a married woman might be sued upon her contracts, or torts, without joining her husband with her, and that any judgment recovered against her for either should be payable out of her separate property. It is not intended to subject a married woman to arrest and imprisonment in civil cases for torts committed during coverture or to destroy immunity in that respect which she has heretofore enjoyed in this State."

Christmas on the Old Plantation.

"Bang, snap, fizz, bang!" When first I opened my eyes in the gray December dawn, I almost believed it to be the Fourth of July, for surely it could be naught but firecrackers that were thus noisily saluting my ears. But as the cobwebs of sleep passed from my brain I quickly recalled that this was my first Christmas in the "Sunny South," and that I had been told that in some places it was a custom of the light-hearted Africans to welcome the happy day with the gay and festive Chinese crackers.

With considerable curiosity, then, I sprang from my couch and hurried to the window, to gaze down upon the courtyard below, where dozens of black and shining little "pickaninnies" were snuggling and tumbling over each other in a perfect frenzy of delight, and occasionally being brought to order by a well aimed, cuff from some fat, good-natured "Mammie," who, however, seemed to enjoy the small fire works as much as the smallest chocolate-hued shaver there. Suddenly the master appeared bowing and smiling upon the broad veranda, when in an instant arose such a chorous of "Cris'mus gif', massa, Cris'mus gif'!" as speedily brought a shower of small coins scattering among the crowd. Then what a frantic scramble ensued, while for two hours later, the mistress of the household had her hands full, giving out extra rations of butter, sugar, tea and tobacco, to say nothing of gay bandannas, aprons, ribbons, and large gilt pins and earrings for the young and pretty girls.

The whole day, then, was one of feasting and jollification, the men, boys and dogs indulging in that rarest of sports to the true African, an exciting "possum hunt," while in the evening, the negro quarter was a scene of boisterous revelry, as old and young "tripped the light fantastic toe," to the squeaky strains of Uncle Jake's antique fiddle. Not till the night was far spent did the fun subside, and closed with a "cake walk," when in stiff and silent pairs the dusky belles and beaux paraded two by two, and in the end Mamm Chloe proudly carried off the cake; for in negro vernacular, "she never but an eyelid, and wore a death-like look on her face," two peculiarities which the company evidently considered the hight of grace and beauty. Certainly she was a "sight for gods or men," as with shoulders back, and arms akimbo, she marched with an air of a queen, and vainly conscious of her holiday finery, a low-necked gown, gorgeous bandanna, and glittering beads and earrings, which afterward how it was that both he and his chief wore such fine toggery, and looked so much as if they had just turned out to church, while with us our outward garb scarcely rose to the dignity of 'shabby genteel.' He enlightened us regarding the contrast, by explaining that when their headquarters wagons had been pressed so closely by our cavalry a few days before, and it was found that they would have to destroy all their baggage except the clothes they carried on their backs, each one, naturally, selected the newest suit he had."

In Brief, and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

A Wicked Son's Bet.

John (rushing in excitedly)—Mother, stick your head out of the window, quick!

Mother—What's the matter, Johny, house on fire?

Johnny—No; but I've bet Billy Jones a nickel against a quarter that I've got the ugliest mother on the block. Stick yer head out of the window, quick, so he kin see for himself.

Eugene Field on the Bedbugs.

Eugene Field was here not long ago under an assignment to describe the Omaha school property of ex-President Hayes, and I had the pleasure of dining with him at one of our first class hotels. After dinner we went up to his room. When he opened the door for me to go in I saw probably the most remarkable apartment it has ever been my lot to witness. The walls had been white originally, I suppose, but as I glanced at them they seemed to have been transformed into a dirty yellow. The sheets of the bed had been turned down, and they exhibited the same discoloration. The windows had spots of yellow on them, and the washstand and dressing case were similarly blotched. I turned to Field wonderingly. He was looking very sober even and. "I had some trouble with the bedbugs last night," he explained pathetically, "and I didn't sleep very well. As soon as it was light I went down to the drug store and bought four pounds of insect powder." And he has used it all, and with commendable thoroughness.

We sat in the yellow room and chatted a few minutes, and then Field rose and rang the bell. A girl appeared, and he asked her to send up the housekeeper As that large, venerable and matronly person opened the door she saw Field in the center of the room assuming a tractical attitude, and rendered most fiendishly ridiculous by the waving plumes of a large feather duster which he had found on the dressing case, and the handle of which he had stuck between his collar and the back of his neck. It was a tableaux as funny as could be improvised. It was broken presently by Field announcing himself in blood curdling tones to the housekeeper as "Spat, the Redbug King." Then he plucked her mysteriously by the sleeve, and led her over to the dressing case. He opened the top drawer of that article of furniture, and there, disposed in regular line, were fourteen bedbugs lying in the silent pathos of death on as many small fragments of newspaper. I shall never forget the expression of fear, astonishment and shame with which that housekeeper turned and ran out of the room.

Felt His Confidence betrayed.

"See here!" said a Wayne county farmer as he entered a Griswold street restaurant the other day. "I don't like the way I have been used."

"What's wrong?" asked the restaurateur.

"Last fall I bought a can of oysters here."

"Yes, I remember."

"When I took it home to my wife suggested that we put it away down cellar for Forth of July. When we opened it on the glorious Fourth—"

"Great Scots!"

"Yes, you'd have said great Scot and little Scots and all the other sorts of Scots. You said they were fresh oysters, and I took your word for it and paid 40 cents in cosh."

The restaurateur counted out forty cents, placed the change in the man's hand, and motioned him to go out.

"Thankee," said the farmer, as he backed out; "you are a square man, and I told my wife that you were probably deceived in the oysters yourself. One of my neighbors said he smelt 'em seven miles down the road. Thankee—this is k'rect."

I suffered with rheumatism in the shoulder for months and the only thing I found that did me any good was Salvation Oil. It cured me and I recommended it to all sufferers with said disease.

Chaffed the Wrong Man.

A citizen who had just laid down $800 for a span of carriage horses was driving out Woodward avenue the other day when he met a farmer coming with a load of apples. Desiring to chaff the stranger a bit, he drew up and inquired:

"Say, how'll you trade teams?" The farmer halted, got down from his vehicle looked the team over, and slowly replied

"Wall, by gosh!"

"What's the matter?"

"If you hand't stopped me, I wouldn't have known the team."

"Did you ever see these horses before?"

"Did I? Why I raised 'em! Sold 'em both to a horse-trader in town three weeks ago. That nigh one has the heaves, and the other one is a cribber and has two spavins. I'll trade you for $75, and that's allowing $25 apiece more on your horses than I got."

The owner of the "spankers" hasn't seen a peaceful hour since that meeting.—Detroit Free Press.

I HAVE not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I procured a bottle, and since the first days' use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone. D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal.

frame stable and other outbuildings. There is also on this tract a good water power Saw Mill, with excellent water power for both saw and grist mill; the old "Baker Distillery" is also located on this property. The farm contains a fine young orchard of bearing fruit trees. About 15 acres of the land is cleared and the balance well timbered. The farm lies along the Mt. Pleasant and Bedford Turnpike, and the dwelling is in the town of Bakersville. This tract will be sold separately, in parcels, or as a whole, to the best advantage of the estate.

No. 2. Containing 233 acres more or less, adjoining lands of Wesley Barclay, Urbin Mason, and others. The whole of this tract is covered with timber, principally chestnut and white oak.

TERMS:

Ten per cent of purchase money to be paid as soon as the property is knocked down; one-third of the balance to be paid on the delivery of deed, and the remaining two-thirds to be paid annually and to be secured on the premises. Possession given March 31, 1888.

JONT. G. BARCLAY,
Trustee.

For any information in regard to the above property address the Trustee at Bakersville.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1888.

GREATLY ENLARGED.

Much the Biggest of all the N. Y. Weeklies.

Greater Variety of Contents, New Presses, New Type, New Appliances.

AT THE HEAD OF THE REPUBLICAN PRESS.

THE New York Weekly Tribune will be enlarged on or before the 1st of January, 1888, by the addition of from four to eight more pages of actual reading matter—an increase of size of great expense to THE TRIBUNE, but without expense to the subscriber.

A complete outfit of the new folding and inserting presses will be put into THE TRIBUNE press-room in November and December. And the extra sheet will be folded into its place in the main sheet before it comes from the press. The enlarged TRIBUNE will be the biggest and best of all the New York weeklies, and the new machinery will print it, in the enlarged form, at the rate of 72,000 copies per hour.

New Features and a greater Variety of Contents will be added to The Tribune during the coming year. Readers will be given nearly a half more for their money than ever before.

Pensions for the old volunteers, especially Service Pensions, are being vigorously agitated in The Tribune; much space is given in every issue to this subject. Better Protection to Farmers under the Tariff; the salvation of the country from the curse of intemperance; and the rescue of the national government from the hands of the rebel brigadiers; these, and all the other live issues of the day are receiving aggressive, earnest and loyal treatment in The Tribune.

The Tribune does not attempt to supercede the local State and county press. But, in the great Presidential conflict now at hand, every thinking Republican, old soldier, farmer, and temperance man should have his local paper AND The New York Tribune.

Subscription Rates—Weekly, $1 a year; extra copy with every five. Semi-Weekly $2 a year; extra copy with every five. Daily, $8.50 per year. Sunday Tribune, $1.50. New subscribers receive the paper until January 1, 1889. Remit always by draft, check express or postal money order, or registered letter.

Premiums—1. The New York Tribune's History of the United States and Pocket Atlas World, 16mo., 254 pages, 50 maps, 50 colored diagrams; price, 40 cents; to subscribers, 20 cents; prettiest premium of the year—a fascinating running account of the history of the country, with a great variety of statistics and general information.

2. Presidential Pocket Knife; subscribers' names and picture of his choice for President on the handle; send for descriptive circular; price, at retail, $1.75, but given with the Weekly Tribune one year for the same money, $1.75; two other styles for less money.

3. Popular Picture Gallery—6 fine pictures including the new officers of the U. A. Mr. Blaine, Senators Evarts and Hiscock, "Return of the Mayflower," "Christ Before Pilate," and "Children Writing to Santa Claus." Send for circular.

4. Waltham Watch; expansion balance movement, stem winder, stem set, 7 jewels, nickel case, thoroughly reliable, and an excellent watch; with the Weekly Tribune 1 year for $7.50.

5. Tribune's "Book of Open Air Sports."

6. Webster's "Unabridged Dictionary."

7. Wood's "Household Medicine."

These premiums cannot be described in full here. Send for circular.
