How they Make Farmers in Denmark.

Young men are apprenticed to the best farmers all over the kingdom for two or three years, under the oversight of the royal agricultural society. They work for good farmers for one year as learners, receiving a small sum besides their board and lodging. At the end of the year, the apprentice is removed to a farm in another part of the kingdom, and his third year is spent on a still different farm in a district where a different kind of agriculture is practiced. The society gives each apprentice a number of agricultural books at the outset which becomes his property upon the completion of three years. The apprentices report to the society at stated intervals, and from these reports and other records where they have worked, the society judges of their progress and grants diploma's accordingly. The young men must get a thorough knowledge of all kinds of practical farming, but they have to work for it, as they are at hard labor from 4 a. m. to 7 p. m. except the meal hours. The society has started the system of apprenticing young men in the best of dairies for three months instead of three years.—American Farmer.

On Wimmen's Rights.

"Wimmen haint no business with the laws of the country?"

"If they haint no business with the law, the law haint no business with them," says I warmly. "Of the three clases that haint no business with the law—lunatics, idiots and women—the lunatics and idiots have the best of it," says I, with a great rush of ideas into my brain that almost lifted up the border of my headdress. "Let an idiot kill a man; what of it? says the law. Let the luny steal a sheep; again the law murmurs in a calm and gentle tone, 'what of it?' They haint no business with the law and the law haint no business with them. But let one of the third class, let a woman steal a sheep, does the law soothe her in those comforting tones? No, it thunders her in the awful accents, 'You haint no business with the law, but the law has a good deal of business with you, vile female; start for State's prison. You haint nothing at all to do with the law, only to pay all the taxes it tells you to—embrace a license bill that is running to your husband—give up your innocent little children to a wicked father if he tells you to—and a few other things, such as being dragged off to prison by it, chained up for life, and hung et cetery."

Methought I once heard the words," sighs the female. 'True government consists in the consent of the governed. Did I dream them, or did the voice of the luny pour them into my ears?

"Haint I told you, frowns the law on her, that don't mean wimmen? Have I got to explain to your weakened female comprehension again the great fundymental truth that wimmen haint included and mingled in the law books and statutes of the country only in a condemning and pushing sense, as it were? Though I feel it to be bending down my powerful manly dignity to elucidate the subject further, I will consent to remind you of the consoling fact that, though you wimmen are from the tender softness of your natures and the illogical weakness of your minds unfit for having any voice in making the laws that govern you, you have the right, and nobody can ever deprive you of it, to be punished in a future world just as hard as a man of the strongest intellect, and to be hung in this world jest as dead as a dead man; and what more can you ask for you unreasonable woman you?"

"Then groans woman as the fundymental truth rushes upon her; 'I can be hung by the political rope, but I can't help twist it.'

'Jest so' says the law.

"'Alas!' sithes the woman to herself, 'would that I had the sweet rights of my wild and foolish companions, the idiots and lunys! But, says she, venturing, with a beating heart the timid and bashful inquiry, 'are the laws always just that I should obey them thus implicitly?"

"'Idiots! lunatics! and women! Are they going to speak? thunders the law. Can I believe my right ear? Can I, being blindfolded, trust my seventeen senses? I'll have you understand that it haint no woman's business whether the laws are just or unjust, all you have got to do is jest to obey them so start off for prison, my young woman.'

"'But my housework,' pleads the woman. Woman's place is home: it is her duty to remain at all hazards within its holy and protecting precinct. How can I leave its sacred retirement to moulder in State's prison?"

"'Housework!' and the law fairly yells the word, he is so filled with contempt at the idee. Housework! Jest as if house work is going to stand in the way of the noble administration of the law! I admit the recklessness and immorality of her leaving that holy haven long enough to vote; but I guess she can leave her house work long enough to be condemned, and hung, and so forth.'

"'But I have got an infant,' says the woman, 'of tender days. How can I go?'

"'That is nothing, to the case,' says the law in stern notes. 'The peculiar conditions of motherhood only unfits a female woman in a covered carriage once a year, and layin' her vote on a pole. I'll have you understand it's no hindrance to her at all in a cold and naked cell, or in a public court-room crowded with men.'

"As the young woman totters along to prison, is it any wonder that she sithes to herself:

"'Would that I were a idiot! Alas! is it not possible that I may become even a luny! Then I should be respected."—Josiah Allen's Wife.

New Year's Greeting.

At the opening of a New Year we extend to all our rerders the compliments of the season, and wish them all health, happiness and prosperity. To secure the first we know of no better service we can render than to commend Gilmore's Aromatic wine, the best tonic and vitalizer for men, women and children ever produced. For ladies who are suffering from general debility and diseases peculiar to their sex, it has no equal. For fifteen years it has been the standard remedy in many localities, and has received higher endorsement from physicians and persons who have been benefitted by its use than any other medicine ever introduced.

The Gilmore Remedies are for sale by Biesecker & Snyder, Mammoth Block, Somerset, Pa.

For 30 years I have been troubled with catarrh—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist here recommended Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. My catarrh was chronic and very bad. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer,) Pawtucket, R. I.

Two boys were seen pummeling a smaller one on a side street the past week, ween a passerby went up to them and ordered them to desist asking at the same time what it was all about. Dead silence for a moment. The passerby again demanded what it meant. Then one of the young fighters, more bold than the other, answered: "It means we've made a law up our way that no fellow would clean off a sidewalk for less than ten cents, and we've caught this scab doing it for five!"—Boston Record.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which we sell on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50 cents and $1. Trial sizes free. At all Druggists.

I was troubled with catarrh in my head to an annoying extent for three years. After using one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm I was entirely cured.—Wm. J. Cline, Victor, N. Y.

Gratitude is the music of the heart when its chords are swept by the gentle breeze of kindness.

Walking advertisements for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are the thousands it has cured.
