The general Republican view was expressed by Mr. McKinley, who said the platform on the tariff ought to be entirely satisfactory to Republicans. It makes the issue dear between free trade and protection. It is the 1884 platform, as Watterson and Mor son meant it, and against the construction cut upon it by Randall and others in New fork, New Jersey and Connecticut. It is the platform of 1884 as interpreted by Presilent Cleveland's free trade message. It approves the Mills bill, which, as its author im, is but a partial response to the Presiby a bill which shall more fully embody its ideas and those of his party upon this ecoducts, and against the protective system.
