Free Wool.

For the first time in secenty-five years the Congress of the United States has voted to put wool on the free list. In all the vicissitudes that have from time totime overtaken our protective tarial, this is the boldest and most decided movetoward free trade ever taken by the House of Representatives. Revenue hariffs we have had, but they have recognized the rights of wool growers to a share in the protective system, and though the duty was reduced no statesman until the day of Grover Cleveland ever proposed the total abolition of the duty on the product of this most important American industry.
