INESS IN NEW YORK. There are few industries in our big town which give employment to so many men, women and children as the rag and paper trade. This seems a bold statement to make in this city of mammoth factories and crowded occupations, but it is none the less true for that. Our Italian citizens enjoy a monopoly of the trade in old paper and rags. Very few, if any, other people are engaged in the gathering and storing of this waste material. the utilizing of which forms so vest an industry. A Pig Caused the War of 1812.

It all happened in this wise : Two citizens of Providence, R. I., fell into a most inseemly discussion on account of the inwiess trespossings of a pig owned by one of them. The aggrieved party possessed a very fine garden, in which it ure, weeding grafting, and transplanting the flowers and vegetables in which he delighted. Poultry in Summer.

It seems very hard to keep poultry shut up during hot weather, and so it often is. But by taking the needed care, their lot may be made very comfortable, and the trouble be amply repaid in eggs. The heavy fowls, the Asiatics, need only a low inclosure, but the constant layers, such as the Lephorns, need a high fence. The present styles of wire netting allow one to build an effective inclosure at a moderate outlay. If the fowls find their wants provided for within the yard, they will have less tendency to roam than if comfort was lacking. When fowls roam abroad, green vegetable food and fresh insects are found in abundance. If there is, as there should be on every farm, a garden of good size, the wastes from the regetables as well as weeds should be thrown to the fowls.

Another method to supply them with vegetable food and insects also is to measure off two ample beds within the yard, and break them up with the spade of plow. Make a frame of the size of the bed, cover it with wire netting, and provide sides about six inches high. These was his custom to spend his hours of leis- sides may be boards of the proper width, and held up by strong stakes, to which the boards may be nailed, or by using two stakes one on each side of the board Spade up one of the beds, allowing the hirds to pick up the worms and insects for you can't well prevent this. Sow it thickly to rye, pack down or roll the surgarden in which it had been rooting all face, and put on the frame. If after the rye starts the birds manage to get at the plants, make the sides of the frame high-

When the rye reaches the net work, spade up and sow the other hed in the same manner, allowing the fowls to cut restrain the animals roving proponsities: off the grain shoots as they come up through the wire. When the rye of the second bed comes up through the netting rickety fences in proper repair, the pig take the wire from the first frame, and might take his daily airing without temp-let the fowls have free access to it, to eat what they will, and scratch for what they may find. In two or three days spade up hed number one, turning under the roots and whatever of the stalks the fouls have left on it, and they also should have left a liberal manuring. Sow anew and treat as before, alternating the beds until it becomes too late to sow. The last sowing should leave a good crop upon the ground, from which the binis shall be kept during the winter by the use of the frames. The green rye will start very early and be very welcome to the fivels. which should be allowed to forage upon one of the beds, while the other crop is growing to be fed through the frame, and the same rotation countinued. The rve may sometimes be alternated with bats, mustard or whatever other crops may be preferred, but a winter gmin should be sown at the last sowing. Ground bone may beapplied to the beds as a fertilizer, and when the hens have their way with the beds they will pick un a for of one making marginal but this should not be the only food of the kind furnished. Ground bones, which can usually be bought in cities, should be given freely. At a distance from such murkets look to home resources.
