In St. Olave's Chambers.

London Letter to Brooklyn Times.

"Come and see St. Olave's chambers," said a London acquaintance as we were walking along the New Kent road just south of the Thames the other day. "It is just around the corner here and I know the janitor pretty well."

"St. Olave's chambers? What does that mean? A swell apartment house?"

"The name is aristocratic enough for that, certainly, but it belongs to a big cheap lodging house, in which I know you will be interested. The place is a strange one, and harbors queer people, but it has the reputation of being one of the best managed in London."

We had turned away from the main street while talking and now stood at the wide doorway of a neat brick building somewhat resembling an old-fashioned Brooklyn station house. Just within the door a barrier ran across the hall, admittance being given only by a turnstile, which registered us when we passed through as two more in the stream of humanity which had flowed in the doors of this hospitable shelter. The keeper, a hard-looking man in his shirt sleeves, met us in the office, a little room lined with rows of keys much like the keyboard of a hotel. Each of these he explained, commanded a private box with a corresponding number which could be hired for a small fee nightly—two cents, I believe—to hold the valuables of the lodger, usually consisting of a few plates, a morsel of bread, or possibly a spare article of clothing. I wondered how such articles came into the possession of casual lodgers, but the keeper explained that many of his guests were by no means casual, but hard-working men who were forced by scanty wages to the shelter of a lodging house. With these explanations we started on the round of observation.

The building had four or five stories, each divided into three long rooms with windows at front and back. In each, placed as close together as possible, were rows of narrow cots scantily clothed. The walls were freshly whitewashed, the floor and woodwork perfectly clean, the bedding reasonably so, though coarse. The street floor was given up to offices and storerooms of the building, and in the basement were a surprising number of conveniences for the lodgers. Here were baths and closets, laundry tubs where the guests were encouraged to wash their clothes, great fires before which to dry them and cook their food. There were a few rude benches and tables, where some of the lodgers, probably out of a job were sitting, and others were engaged in cooking or washing. One savory "bloater," plenty of potatoes and tea were the only things I noticed in preparation at the fires, and to supplement these luxuries the cooks had loaves of bread to cut as required.

The janitor kept up a running fire of talk as we peered about. "We've 452 beds now, and they are all full every night and plenty turned away, so they're building a landition beyond 'ere. When that's finished we shall 'ave 851 beds. We gets very few tramps and loafers. They mostly 'avest the pennies to spare and goes to the casuals (free lodging houses of the parishers). Our lodgers are most laboring men in 'ard luck and many of 'em comes 'ere month after month. No, we don't 'ave no women lodgers. Some 'ouses 'as both women hand men and claims to be respectable, but ——. I'm han old sailor myself, sir—see my tattooing—and I know what discipline is. Yes, there are many of these lodging 'ouses. Find 'em bevery where. Not hoften has neat and horderly as this," and he launched into an apparently not undeserved praise of his own management.

It is hardly the custom for American workingmen to be packed like herrings in cheap lodging houses, though there are some on the Bowery that compare very unfavorably with St. Olave's chambers, both in price and accommodations. Here, however, there is a tremendous lodging house population, not always as well housed and looked after as in the house I have been describing. There seemed no doubt in the mind of any one that the manager would be able to fill his 851 beds with desirable lodgers.

St. Olave's chambers are money making institution, but charity and brotherly love are supposed to be the mainspring of the Salvation army shelter that I afterward visited in the neighborhood of the East India docks. Here the beds were rough boxes of wood laid closely together. Each was 22 inches wide, so that six men were accommodated to every 11 feet in length, but the captain in charge slept himself in one of the boxes to prevent grumbling on part of the guests. In the basement were benches and ranges for cooking, and in one of the upper rooms a meeting place for religious services. There were no such conveniences for lodgers as St. Olave's chambers boasted, and they could do no cooking for themselves, but could buy some soup made by the army cooks for a penny. There was a hard crowd hanging around the place, and it was dirty and not inviting. As often happens, the charity comprises not well with the money-making institution.

There is little comfort in the life of a man condemned to live in these cheap lodgings and have nowhere a home, but at least they are better than the streets and less demoralizing than charity. Such as they are, they shelter every night many thousands of Englishmen whose only fault is poverty.

"I am weary of living," moaned poor Mrs. Black
"For I'm fairly worn out with the ache in my back:
My nerves are a chain
Of weakness and pain,
And my poor head is aching as if it would crack.
"Now, don't be discouraged," cried good Mrs White,
"It is never so dark but there's promise of light;
I can tell you, in brief
What will give you relief—
Pierce's Favorite Prescription will soon set you right."

It is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weakness and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper. Large bottles (100 doses) $1. Six for $5.

A novel shortly to be published will bear the title, "Shut the Gate." It must be a sequel to "The Dogs Is Loose."—Rochester Post Express.

Can a Man Swallow a Cannon-ball?

Well, "that depends." He can if his throat is large enough and the cannon-ball not too large. The question really seems worthy of some consideration in view of the size of some of the pills that are prescribed for suffering humanity. Why not throw them "to the dogs" and take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? Small, sugar-coated, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, in glass, and always fresh.

Pathetic Cry of a Sweet Child Who Plead Piteously and then Died.

The child was so sensitive, so like that little shrinking plant that curls at the breath and shuts its heart from the light.

The only beauties she possessed were an exceedingly transparent skin and the most mournful, large blue eyes.

I had been trained by a very stern, strict, conscientious mother, but I was a hardy plant, rebounding after every shock: misfortune could not daunt, though discipline tamed me. I fancied, alas! that I must go through the same routine with this delicate creature; as one day when she had displeased me exceedingly by repeating an offence, I was determined to punish her severely. I was very serious all day, and upon sending her to her little couch I said: "Now, my daughter, to punish you, and show you how very, very naughty you have been, I shall not kiss you to-night."

She stood looking at me, astonishment personified, with her great mournful eyes wide open—I supposed she had forgotten her misconduct till then, and I left her with big tears dropping down her cheeks and her little red lips quivering.

Presently I was sent for "Oh, mamma, you will kiss me; I can't go to sleep if you don't!" she sobbed, every tone of her voice trembling, and she held out her little hands.

Now came the struggle between love and what I falsely termed duty. My heart said give me a kiss of peace; my stern nature urged me to persist in my correction that I thought impress the fault upon her mind. That was the way I had been trained, till I was most submissive child; and I remembered how I had often thanked my mother since for her straightforward course.

I knelt by the bedside. "Mother can't kiss you, Ellen," I whispered, though every word choked me. Her hand touched mine: it was very hot, but I attributed it to her excitement. She turned her little grieving face to the wall; I blamed myself as the fragile form shook with self suppressed sobs, and crying, "Mother hopes little Ellen will learn to mind her after this," left the room for the night. Alas! in my desire to be severe I forgot to be forgiving.

It must have been twelve o'clock when I was awakened by my nurse, apprehensive, I ran eagerly to the childs chamber, I had a fearful dream.

Ellen did not know me. She was sitting up, crimsoned from the forehead to the throat: her eyes so wild that I almost drew back aghast at her glances.

From that night a raging fever drank up her life; and what think you was the incessant plant that poured into my anguished heart? "Oh, kiss me, mamma, do kiss me; I can't go to sleep. I won't be naughty if you'll only kiss me! Oh, kiss me, dear mamma, I can't go to sleep."

Holy little angel! she did go to sleep one gray morning and she never woke again; never. Her hand was locked in mine and all my veins grew icy with its gradual chill. Faintly the light faded out of the beautiful eyes; whiter and whiter grew the tremulous lips. She never knew me; but with her last breath she whispered, "I will be good, mamma, if only you'll kiss me."

Kiss her! God knows how passionate, but unavailing were my kisses upon her cheek and lips after that fatal night. God knows how wild were my prayers that she might know, if but only once, that I kissed her. God knows how I would have yielded up my life, could I have asked forgiveness of that sweet child.

Well, grief is unavailing now! She lies in her little tomb. There is a marble urn at her head, and a rosebush at her feet; there grows sweet summer flowers; there waves the gentle grass; there birds sing their matins and vespers; there the blue sky smiles down to-day, and there lies buried the freshness of my heart.

One of the children, a girl about 9 years old had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick, yellow matter. We had two physicians prescribe for her, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured. —O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

A French Submarine Torpedo.

The Gymnotus, a new submarine torpedo boat built by our Government from the designs of M. Zede, director of naval construction, has been placed in the water at the arsenal of Toulon. She is 167 1-2 feet in length by six feet in extreme breadth perpendiculars. Her ascent and descent in the element are effected by the expulsion or reception of water-ballast in tanks used for that purpose, and the sustentation of an internal atmosphere depends upon reservoirs of compressed air. Her movement upon a horizontal plane is actuated by an ordinary rudder, while her movement up or down is governed by hinged rudders attached to her rear sides. The usual small dome shaped cupola of glass, about fourteen inches in diameter, used for observation purposes, is fixed in her upper deck. Her motor is a Krebs electric battery of fifty horse-power, compressed air operating her in terms functions. An officer, pilot and two engineers will comprise her crew. She is designed to pass under the hull of an enemy and attach an explosive cartridge to her bilge, which is to be fired by electricity when the boat is a safe distance away. The trials thus far have been a great success.

Catarrh Cured

Catarrh is a very prevalent disease, with distressing and offensive symptoms. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives ready relief and speedy cure, from the fact it acts through the blood, and thus reaches every part of the system.

"I suffered with catarrh fifteen years. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla and I am not troubled any with catarrh, and my general health is much better." I. W. Lellis, Postal Clerk Chicago & St. Louis Railroad.

"I suffered with catarrh 6 or 8 years; tried many wonderful cures, inhalers, etc., spending nearly one hundred dollars without benefit. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, and was greatly improved." M. A. Abbey, Worcester, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. F. Thompson, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. Barrington, 236 Bank Street, New York City.

The Sultan's Electric Cart.

At the skating rink, Camden town, a private trial was made of an eleltric dog cart which has been constructed by Messrs. Immisch & Co., of Kentish town, to the order of the Sultan of Turkey. The vehicle presents the appearance of an ordinary four wheeled dog cart, without shafts. It is made of walnut, and has seats for four persons—two in front, and two at the back. Beneath the seats are placed the accumulators which supply the electricity to the motor. The accumulators, twenty-four in number, are of special type, and contain a charge sufficient to propel the vehicle for five hours at an average speed of ten miles per hour on an ordinary track. Their weight is about 7 cwt., and that of the carriage all complete, a little over 11 cwt. The motor is one of Messrs. Immish's one-horse-power type, and in this case uses a current of 20 amperes, with an electro motive power of 48 volts. The connection between the motor and the carriage is effected by a chain running around the off hind wheel, the revolutions of the motor to those of the wheel being as 18 to 1. When the vehicle is running at a speed of ten miles an hour the motor makes 1,440 revolutions per minute, and develops a three-quarter horse-power. The steering is effected by means of an adaptation in the forecarriage. A shaft surmounted by a steering handle, passes through the footboard, and terminates in a pinion which works in a toothed rack fixed above the fore axle-tree. The driver thus possesses perfect control over the direction of the vehicle, and can regulate the speed by means of a foot-brake, acting on both hind wheels. Immediately in front of the driver, also, is the switch for completing the current, and in order to obviate any jar at starting three resistances are provided. In its course round and about in the skating rink, the carriage traveled with remarkable smoothness, at a very good speed, rounding the corners with great ease.—Liverpool Post.

Symptoms of Catarrh.

Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath, is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression a hacking cough and general debility. If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from Nasal Catarrh. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptons. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptons, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians. Five hundred dollars reward is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. Remedy sold by druggist, at only 50 cents.
