The Editor's Life

A young man writes from one of the rural villages of Tennessee to the Louisville Convier-Journal: "I have been teaching school about a year ago, but I do not like it. It is time I have chosen a profession, and I think I would gather be an editor than anything else, for I like ease and comfort and plenty of monev. and do not like to work. To be an editor, to sit in an elegant sanctum, with nothing to lo but write when I feel like it, to he se plenty of money and togo where and when I please, free of cost, and lead the editor's quiet life of case, without care or trouble of any sort, is the height of my ambition. My friends think I ought to study law or medicine, or keep on teaching; but to be a lawyer or doctor requires too much and teaching is too much work. Under
