YOU OR I. I was so glad to know...

MR. BRACEBRIDGE'S DILEMMA. He is like lightning...

He would have been well could he have known the fate of his letter of explanation.

It was late afternoon before 'Yellow Bob' returned to carry a note out to the Nursery.

Next to her came the twins, Nellie and Sallie, just turning thirteen, and the youngest Tomboys that ever existed.

He sent up to Lexington and bought a riding-horse from a dealer there, and then, like a knight of old, felt ready to do battle for his lady fair.

The Bonbon county pike winds through the green fields like a silver ribbon, and here and there...

One night (it was truly night when they started, for the August day had been too hot to think of anything but coolness and seclusion as long as the sun shone).

He leave Kitty? Kitty, glorious Kitty, whose father he was to see that very day.

He had already made friends with Jolly, happy-go-lucky Major Basil.

What would they think of him? It had got to that now, Bracebridge was too much of a man to shrug his responsibilities.

It was daylight when he finally finished the five sheets of paper in which he tried to do himself justice.

He would have been well could he have known the fate of his letter of explanation.

aged to say, finally. "And did poor pop think it was you?"

And then she sat up again, and reaching out took Bracebridge's passive hands.

An Even Thing. I had a big chunk of lead from a Confederate cavalry carbine driven into my shoulder at Brandy Station, and was in a hospital at Washington for treatment.
