"I did. I licked him until he could hardly stand, and I've always been glad

"You have, ch?" said the other, breathing fast and hard. "Do you know that that boy swore a terrible oath ?" "I presume he did, as he was a thorough young villain." "He swore an oath that he would grow up and bunt for you and pound you within an inch of your life."

"But I haven't heard from him yet." "You hear from him now. He stands before you. I am that boy."

"Well?" "Prepare to be licked. My time has come at last."

He made a dive for the old pedagogue, but the latter evaded him, made a halfturn and hit him on the jaw, and Godkin went over a chair in a heap. Then the whilem schoolmaster piled onto him and licked him until he cried "Enough!" and it didn't take him over three minutes to do it. Then he retired to get on another collar and replace some buttons, and I helped Godkin up and observed : "You didn't wait quite long enough, I "Say! That's where I made a miscue," he replied. "I see now I ought to have held off until he had got to be about 150 years old. The old devil is all of 70 now, but he licked me right off the reel, and I'll never have the sand to stand up to him again. Contempt of Court.

The stories of early western judges are almost as numerous and incredible as the bear stories of that part of the country. The following incident, which is vouched for a fact, is of a judge who had a very lofty idea of his own legal capacity and was at the same time auxious to sustain the dignity of his court. A "shooting case" came before him

There was no direct evidence as to the perpetrator of the murder, but the individual arrested was well known, and had confessed the deed.

When brought into court the judge cautioned the prisoner not to commit himself; that he must remember his rights as a free citizen, and that, above all things, be must not interrupt the proceedings of the court. After the friendly warning the judge proceeded to state that he, the prisoner, was accused of having on such a date, shot the de-Upon this the prisoner broke in, "Wal,

"Hold your tongue, sir!" he exclaimed. "Haven't I told you not to interrupt me? I shall commit you for contempt of court if you do so again?" he added, sternly. He then repeated the accusation, upon which the prisoner again broke in:

"I told ye afore that I killed-" The judge's indignation was intense at this second interruption, and he demanded: "Mr. Sheriff, what is your evidence?"

"I have nothing but circumstantial evidence, your honor, and the prisoner's | own confession. "Then," said the judge, "I discharge the prisoner on this accusation, but commit him for contempt of court."- Youth's

She Didn't Speak.

Among the passengers of an eastbound Michigan avenue street car on Friday morning was a stoop-shouldered, ciderly gentleman, with an iron-gray moustache, who is connected with an office in the City Hail. The car was crowded, when a neatly dressed, good-looking young lady got aboard at Eighth street, and there was no seat for her to occupy. The city official is a member of the Elks' Lodge, and one of the rigid rules of that order is that no member shall retain a seat in a street car while one of the weaker sex is compelled to stand. As she took his proffered seat she calmly unfoided a newspaper and began to read. "Beg pardon," said the gentleman with the gray monstacke, "did you speak ?"

"I did not," said the girl, curtly. "Excuse me, I thought you said 'thank

There was a titter in the car, and the young lady bit her lips desperately behind the newspaper .- Detroit Free Press,

She Wanted Small Change.

She was a sweet fixed, demore little woman, and as she sat in the ladies' waiting room of the Pennsylvania Reilroad in Jersey City more than one man had his eyes on her and wondered who she was. By and by a young man in a check suit and carrying a great deal of check took a circuit around and sat down beside her. He had scarcely drepped into a sent before she gave him a sacet smile and asked him if he would do her a "Wonder how many more fools she will strike before her train goes?" "What do you mean?" "Look at thal bill."

It was a $5 Confederate note; and as the young man stood staring at it with blinking eyes the ticket man added: "You are the fifth one within two the Commissioners of Somers-t county will receive smalled proposals for an ir in or wooden hours. Stonehenge.

This strange relic of a forgotten people is situated nine miles from Salisbury, England, in a great plain which extends as far as the eye can reach. The driveway was once a broad avenue, one-third of a mile long, with a bank on either side, and a ditch, out of which the earth was thrown, now all overgrown with sod. At the end is a monolith rising sixteen feet high, and beyond is a prostrate slab bearing the marks of tools.

This is called the "slaughtering stone," and here it is supposed the victims were offered to the gods. Beyond these are two great circles of feet high, some weighing thirty tons each. The outer circle is 300 feet in circomference. On the tops of these huge pillars are laid other stones which formerly touched, making a continuous circle. Not fifty stones are now standing. Inside these circles are two ovals, and innermost of all an "altar stone," built open to heaven like the pantheon. Surrounding these stone circles are cres of small burial grounds, where the arly chiefs of Britain were interred. Skeletons have been found with the knees gathered up to the head, some extended at full length, others burned to ashes and collected in urns. Half a mile away, between two banks, is a racecourse 330 feet broad and over a mile long. The question is, Who built this mysterious temple and others of its like in ireat Britair ?
