Beautiful prospect? Away across the eastern plains the orb of day is slowly rising in its majestic granduer; now a silver-lined cloud obstructs its brilliancy for moment, and is dispersed. off to the west the scene is quite different. The shades of night are fleeting westward, and about sixty miles away can be seen the outline of the snowy range, rearing its snow capped beights heavenward. The country between here and the main range of the Rockies is wild and romantic. It is a succession of rocks, canons and rifts, with here and there a rushing torrent of sparkling water, fed by the melting snows far above the timberline. But I am getting too far away from the Peak-the subject of my This noted peak stands out in bold relief from its surroundings. It is a landmark discernible at a long distance. The Peak is accessible by a wagon-road through the Ute Pass, and a foot path known as the Pike's Peak trail. The latter being traversed only by pedestrians and burros. No doubt some of your readers are not informed of the Pike's Peak railroad enterprise, leading direct from the base to the summit. Here is a grand display of engineering skill. The road in many places assumes a 25 per cent. grade or in other words, the ascending grad berewith given in full. The population in of eight or ten miles. The track is con-
