In view of the pending discussion it is a somewhat singular circumstance that both these treaties of reciprocity failed to secure the approval of Congress, and falled for the express reason that both provided for the free admission of sugar. Congress would not then allow a single pound of sugar to come in free of duty under any circumstances whatever. And now the proposition is to open our ports free to everybody's sugar and to do it with such rapidity that we are not to have a moment's and has given the Southern leaders ample apportunity to show deeds meet for repentance. With what return? When the majestic moral sentiment of the North demands that every man's vote shall be his own, to cast as his judgment dictates, and to be counted as he casts it that every citizen shall be on an equal footing with every other citizen-that, as "all men are created free and equal," we are told that the enactment of a law to carry into effect this primordial principle of human liberty will be met by a "boycott." It is a precile threat, for which the South alone will suffer.

Our change of opinion has certainly been remarkable in so brief a period. Indeed, the only danger of our not securing advantageous treaties of reciprocity now is the possible belief on the part of those countries that we are so anxious for free sugar that by patient waiting they can secure all they desire without money and without price.

Fearing that result, I sought an interview with the eight Republican members of the Committee on Ways and Means more than five months ago—to be exact, on the loth the Declaration of Independence avers,

I endeavored to convince them that it would be expedient and wise to leave to the President, as the treaty-making power, an opportunity to see what advantageous arrangements of reciprocal trade could be effected. I was unable to help in quarters where demagogic tendencies naturally find favor, and will hurt him serionely in others. His restless ambition seemed always on the slert to find something in the nature of a corporation at which to strike. That was his capital and stock in mention this circumstance now because it has been charged in many quarters that the suggestion of reciprocity came too late. In fact my effort was made before the Tariff bill was reported to the House or even trade, and it is this dangerous and communistic trait doubtless which will be pressed most realously as his chief claim to public favor. Great Seashore Vacation Trips via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The great success which has crowned the efforts of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to provide pleasant vacation excursions to the seashore for the people of Pittsburg and Western Pennsylvania, as illustrated in the first two excursions of this season, will do much toward making the two yet to come more brilliant and attractive than ever. These trips include in the tickets, the most desirable resorts on the Jersey coast, and the long return limit of ten days fills the exact period of the average midsummer holiday. The resorts, from which a choice may be made, are Atlantic City, Cape May, Sea Isle City, or Ocean City, and the next date is Thursday, August 7th.
