"MARMY."

BY SOPHIE SWETT. "If it were not for the Dodds and the Dusenberrys-" That was what Miss Jane Pritchard committee, said the same thing, with grave head-shakings, when Nellie appealed to him for the school.

"They're a rough set over at the Corthey'd be more than you could manage,

"Let me try, doctor. I'm not afraid." And Miss Nellie drew her nineteen-yearold slimness very erect.

The upshot of the matter was that Nellie secured the school and on the first Monday morning when she "called the roll" her heart beat a lively accompaniment to the names of the Dodds and the Dusenberrys. She had found in the desk the book which her predecessor had used and it occurred to her that it would simplify matters to call the names which she found there, and see how many were still pupils. There was nothing very alarming in the appearance of the Dodds and Dusenberrys who answered to their names on that Monday morning. The Dodds were dark, straight-haired little fellows, of a most serious aspect, from Hosea, aged twelve, down to Aaron, who was six, and spoke thickly, by reason of having his thumb in his mouth. Tow hair, snub noses, and freckles seemed to be the characteristics of the Dusenberrys-Leck (a nickname evolved somewhat mysteriously from Alexander), Leonidas and Phebe Jane. In addition to these family haracteristics Phebe Jane, aged ten, had a remarkably prominent chin, and an irregular little figure which showed energy and determination in every line. She could manage," it would be Phebe Jane. And she adhered to this opinion, al-
