THE OPENING GUN.

The Republican State Campaign Brilliantly Opened at Pittsburgh.

Senator Ingalls' Great Speech.

The Republican State campaign was formally opened in the Grand Opera House in Pittsburgh, Saturday evening, September 10, by the speech of Senator Ingalls, who was followed by the speech of the Hon. J. M. Louth, and Senator Ingalls' Great Speech.

Except on sugar, the Senate amendments have been in the line of further reduction. And even in sugar the Senate proposition is a wonderful reduction from present rates. The sugar question seems to be the most complex and troublesome of all that arise from practical consideration of the relations between tariff, revenue and protection.

The Senate's proposition to give the President power to restore reduced duties to old rates in the case of imports from countries that continue to discriminate between the trade of the United States and other countries may be wise or unwise. Actual experience will determine this. Its proposal for the establishment of a permanent tariff commission which shall report from time to time upon all statistics of export, import, foreign and domestic production and price, and the increase or decrease of United States products and prices under various scales of tariff will meet with favor.

The least objectionable feature of the proposed commission is the non-partisan character of its composition. The same commission will be, in fact, a permanent board of tariff statistics, and the representation of both political parties on its board will insure respect for its reports.

But that upon which the Senate mainly is to be congratulated is that it has brought its tariff discussion to a speedy close, and has presented a bill to the House which is in accord with the sentiments of the Republican party and a great majority of the legally qualified voters of the United States.

That same old flag is good enough for Maine and Vermont.

This is not an "off year" by any means, and Somerset county should give the entire Republican ticket not less than 7,500 majority.

The Retain-Neck Senatorial contest in Pittsburgh was decided Friday in favor of Neoh, and he was declared to be the regular nominee of the party.

Since the Maine election the army of howlers yelling "Car, '02 Tyrant," "big boss Reed," have suddenly grown modest. Possibly it is no longer amusing.

The Democrats are so discouraged over their attempt to defeat Reed that they despair of even keeping McKinley out of the Fifty-first Congress by the infamous gerrymandering in Ohio.

Wharton Barker's Committee, Its Declaration in Favor of Democracy.

The long promised declaration of Wharton Barker in favor of Robert E. Pattison Governor has been given to the public. The address is singularly like that issued by the three tailors of Tooley street, who began it thus: "We, the people of England, address our fellow citizens, etc. Mr. Barker is somewhat more modest, as he begins his address thus: "We, the voters of Pennsylvania, address our fellow citizens, etc."

This statement is willfully false, as Mr. Barker knows he cannot possibly maintain this position. He has been given a constant support to the policy and plans of the Republican party. Time and again they have, almost without exception, given earnest support as Managers or Barkeepers to the Democratic party in city, State and National political elections, and it is surprising that they seek to qualify that reckless false assertion in these words: "But all of us, without exception, are of Republican affiliations; we revere the party traditions and fully recognize the great wrongs which the party has accomplished in the past."

There are just 56 signers to this declaration in favor of Free Trade Democracy and measures and men. There is not a Protectionist among them—not one. They are Free Traders, not Protectionists. They are Free Traders, not Protectionists. They are Free Traders, not Protectionists.

The reward of Judas Iscariot, for betrayal, was thirty pieces of silver, but his price was so contemptible that, upon reflection, he went out and hanged himself. It is said that Wharton Barker's reward is to be the Secretary of the Treasury under Governor Cleveland, in the event of the election of that Free Trader, who as President of the United States "challenged the protected industries to the death."

For his opposition to John Sherman, in 1890, Wharton Barker expected to be made Secretary of the Treasury under Governor Cleveland, but he was not. He was a candidate for the same office under Harrison and he lost. He was a candidate for the same office under Harrison and he lost.

Famine in Ireland.

New York, September 11.—A letter from a special correspondent in Ireland to the World says that before the winter sets in America will be asked to send at least $5,000,000 to the west coast of Ireland for the relief of the hungry people, 300,000 of whom will be destitute on account of the potato blight. Along the seaboard of Donegal, Mayo and Galway the potato crop is a total loss, and as the people there depend entirely upon the potato crop, this means that they are already fast up for food. Bitter experience has taught them no better. Further inland where the soil is more fertile the potato crop is more fruitful. Taking Ireland as a whole, it is probable that only a one-third potato crop will be secured. This is much below Scotland, where the blight has also been a disaster. Wheat and oats in Ireland are as good as the English and Scotch harvest.

The leaders of the Irish party are opposed to an appeal for aid to America or any other country, as an appeal of this kind interferes with the plan of campaign. Emigration is one remedy for the distressed people by Belfast, and he intimates that at least a quarter of a million people can be shipped from the west coast of Ireland to the United States by John Dillon, who makes the disbursements under the plan of campaign, says he has now 1,300 families to support, with an average of five people to each family. This winter experience has taught them no better. Further inland where the soil is more fertile the potato crop is more fruitful. Taking Ireland as a whole, it is probable that only a one-third potato crop will be secured.
