Well, he swore he would be deceived no more ; no, never. He would make his own butter.

He bought a cow. He mirked the cow.

That is to say, his wife did, but as man and wife are one, in reality he milked the cow. In time cream rose on the milk.

It rose in good quantities and was collected by the wife. On Saturday evening, as the man waz starting out to spend the evening, the wife remarked: "You must come home early, so as to get up in the morning and churn the butter before going to church."

He said he would. He came home early-in the morning.

About two o'clock. His wife remarked, distinctly:

"Now, sir, I want you to prepare-"

"Two pair-hic-no good." That was sufficient.

She soon after rose. He retired without the formality of removing his boots. She was mad.

He was sleepy. Being mad, she churned the butter and put it away, leaving the buttermitk in the churn. Being sleepy, he did not hear her.

Before leaving for church she wiped the outside of the churn, concealed the butter, and left the buttermilk in the churn.

She also left a note, telling him that the churn was all ready for him to commence operations. He said:

"D-d-d-dasher churn."

It was a dasher churn. He feared his wife, as all men do, and commenced churning. He commenced at nine o'clock.

At half-past nine he looked to see if it was coming. It did not appear to be.

At a quarter past ten be looked ugain. Result of inspection not encouraging. At twenty minutes of eleven, perspiring freely, he happened to think of the bottle of brandy kept in the house for medical purposes.

The butter was not coming neither was his wife. But the brandy was forthcoming. He drank heavily.

At a quarter to twelve be stopped again and made another examination, Result was to warrant another drink. He was getting mad.

At half past twelve he took a lunch and continued churning. At ten minutes past one he looked to see if his wife was coming.

She was not-nor was the butter. At half-past two he could stand it no

And therefore took another drink. * Then he churned five minutes. Next he took his gun and loaded it. At twenty minutes past three he dropped down completely exhausted.

Ten minutes later be had demolished the churn with a hatchet, and was just going out to shoot the cow, when his wife came in almost breathless and put

The Joke Turned.

Some years ago it was still the custom in France to conduct condemned criminals through gaping crowds of idle spectators to the guillotine. On one such occasion the unfortunate beard a would-be wit in the crowd remard to a companion : "Well, I'll bet that fellow don't feel much like sneezing into the basket." The coarse attempt at a joke stung the prisoner, and when be arrived at the scaffold he asked that the proceedings be stayed a moment as he had a confession to make. "Although I denied it at my trial, I had accomplices in the crime for which ing to the joker, "is one of them now."

I have been sentenced, and there," point Great excitement ensued and the party designated was seized by the gendarmes with no gentle hands. Out of the confusion somebody managed to drag order and the wit was placed on the Ask for scaffold beside his accuser.
