There are a good many people who prefer old things to new things, sometimes, perhaps, without as good reason for the preference as an old beggar once showed in the matter of shoes.

This man called at the house of a lady and begged for a pair of shoes. She gave him a nearly new pair of her has bands, which he had laid aside for some reason. A day or two afterward the beggar returned.

"Mum," he said, "can't you give me a pair of shoes—some old ragged ones."

"But," said the lady, "I have just given you an entirely new pair; you have them on now."

"Yes'aa," he said, "but there's the trouble. They're so new, ye see, that they hunt my business.
