The great political parties of our country have bousted long and loud about being the champions of the equality and liberties of selfish interests subverted these principles to purposes of personal greed and the oppression of the people? No class has suffered more from these inroads on the rights of the sople than the agricultural class. They have been slow to resent it, but when it did come it came very emphatic, as was demonstrated at last fall's election, in the defeat of the leading nominee of the dominant party of Pennsylvania, for no other reason than rated his statement to the contrary. Then his record on the farmers' grange tax bill, which had for its object an equitable distrioution of the burdens of government.
