

THE VOICE OF THE PARTY.

Formal Indorsement of Senator Quay by the State and County Conventions.

It is now plain that the Democratic party, as an organization and individuals, are more determined and desperate than ever to assail and overthrow Republicans and Republican principles and carry the coming election by fair and honest means, as clearly evidenced by Democratic methods in New York and elsewhere and their malicious onslaught on the Hon. M. S. Quay in Pennsylvania, and numerous other examples throughout the country.

The Democratic leaders and press are using certain disgruntled Republicans and Democratic sympathizers, as general referees to promote and further their interests.

That the cry of "bribery" raised by Democrats and their sympathizers, in order to discredit our party and cause division and dissension in our ranks, should be disregarded, and will have no effect on the Republicans.

We have no objection to our party being so treated, but we have no objection to our party being so treated, but we have no objection to our party being so treated.

The following is the resolution of the Republican convention at Warren, Pa., held on the 27th of March, 1892.

Resolved, That we hereby express our confidence in the great political general of this Commonwealth, and of the nation, and in the principles of the Democratic party, and in the principles of the Democratic party, and in the principles of the Democratic party.

Too Sympathetic.

The manager of a press syndicate sat in his easy chair, and as his eyes wandered with satisfaction over the luxurious appointments of his office he said to his private secretary, "How many publishers have accepted that story I bought the other day from Squawkey, the rising young Wilkie Collins I discovered in the police court?"

"Ten, sir," replied the respectful secretary.

"How much does each pay for it?"

"Fifty dollars."

"What did I give the fellow for it?"

"One hundred dollars," growled the manager.

"Too much," growled the manager.

"These scribblers are too well-treated altogether. I must do better than this Generosity and business ought, in the nature of things, to be separated as widely as possible. The next one that comes in here, just watch me turn him down."

His reflections were interrupted by the entrance of a young woman with a roll of manuscript in her hand and a face and figure that quickly melted what the manager had for a heart, says the N. Y. Tribune.

"How could he say that to my dear feelings!"

"I have written a story," she began.

"Yes, yes," he interrupted, "but I assure you, miss, there is no demand for stories just now."

"Perhaps not for ordinary stories," she replied, "but for a heart, say the N. Y. Tribune."

"I have no doubt of it, but the manager, 'but the remuneration for such work, even when original, is so small, and so many are engaged in it, that it really is not worth your while, I am sure, to engage in it.'"

"The heroine on her death-bed writes to a man who never saw her, telling him of her love for him. Then she recovers and tries to cut her throat with morphia and—"

"Mortification is a hard thing to cut with, I know," said the manager, "and few people can manage it, though when once it is inserted in the throat it is generally fatal, yet for that—"

"I don't understand," she gasped.

"I say the story, novel though it may be, would not sell. I could not offer you anything worth while for it."

"Nothing at all!" she sighed, and her violet eyes filled with tears.

Swift Flight of a Hawk.

The speed of a hawk or gull on the wing is almost incredibly great. One of the swiftest hawks could make a circle round the smallest of a locomotive traveling 50 miles an hour; while a gull has been known to fly before a favorable wind at the rate of 100 miles an hour.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

I have been troubled with chronic catarrh for years. Ely's Cream Balm is the only remedy among the many that I have used that affords me relief.—E. W. Willard, Druggist, Joliet, Ill.

I have been troubled with catarrh for ten years and have tried a number of remedies, but found no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—Geo. E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochontung, R. I.

What He Feared.

"While I was in England," says one woman, "I was told of an American who on his first trip on an English railway quite held his breath at the rapid running. When his nervousness rather overcame him he approached the guard."

"I say, guard," he ventured, "this is pretty dangerous for safety, isn't it?"

"Oh, no, sir," replied the guard; "we never run off the line here, sir."

"But," said the Yankee quickly re-asserting the patronage, "it is not the line, I'm afraid of running off your confounded little island!"—N. Y. Times.
