CHIVALRY ON MODERN HIGHWAYS.

A ride from the Battery to Harlem on the "L" road during the hours when the trains are crowded, is enough to convince one who is cynically inclined that courtesy is old-fashioned, a virtue belonging to the days of chivalry, for which in this age of progress we have no time.

One day recently at a crowded hour in the afternoon there boarded the train at Redox street an old man trembling with palsy, a cane in each hand. It was the rear end of the car, filled with men, many of whom were intent on their evening papers and did not glance up. Others there were who were not so engaged and could not help seeing the poor old fellow as he looked around in a dazed sort of way, trying meanwhile to preserve a very shabby equilibrium by resting on both canes. Suddenly a young working girl arose and gently forced the old man into her seat. Then one or two gentlemen in a shamefaced sort of way offered her their seats, which she proudly declined.

At Park place a woman entered, a lady in all except her manner, which were many and varied, and she spoke of Washington Pellets. She was past the prime of life and looked weary, but seemed a practical woman and prepared herself to make the best of a very bad situation. The quiet fellow who gave the woman in front of her, whose interesting boy of three or four years occupied an unpaid seat, showed that she had thoroughly sized her up and expected no mercy at her hands.

After a few minutes a plasterer, with hands and garments grimy with toil, got up in a dogged sort of way, motioned the overladen woman to his seat, gave a pull to the peak of his cap so lacking in knightly grace that it was no indication of the knightly heart that prompted the deed, and walked forward hastily, as if to avoid thanks.

Later, a venerable couple, apparently from the country, were allowed to stand although manifestly unfit for such an ordeal, until a couple of mechanics, notwithstanding their burdens of kits of goods, gave their seats to them.

Similar instances might be multiplied. Can it be that the gentle virtue has gone out of date as for "lords and dames of high degree" are concerned and is now only practiced by the humble classes.

There is no reason why a tired business man should give up his seat to a frivolous shopper, although shopping when it becomes a necessity and not a recreation is more tiresome than any business in which I have ever been engaged, but common decency should restrain man or woman from compelling aged and infirm, overburdened or invalid persons to stand.—New York Herald.

A Sharp Soldier.

As we swung into line at the battle of Williamsburg to advance on the Confederate sharpshooters posted in a slashing the regiment halted to redress. I was within one man of the extreme right in the front rank. To the right of us was a narrow lane, and about forty rods up the lane the Confederates were getting a gun into battery.

"That's for us," said the man on the right.

"Yes, and if my brother hadn't come in she'd have finished me," added the red-headed man. "Of course it was my wife. But your books I don't want to lose any more after that glorious victory and I'll have to take them home with me."

"How much will you take to trade places?"

"Five dollars."

"I don't think of it."

"Will you take twenty?"

"Well, I'll give you twenty five dollars and my books and my notes."

"At that moment the gun was discharged and the missile went screaming twenty feet above our heads, and my comrade finished—"

"For not one durned cent! Thank ye Johnny Red—I am fifty dollars ahead on this!"—Detroit Free Press.

Hanged Two Hours but Lives.

MINNEVILLE, Pa., May 26.—Mrs. Nicholas Fiesberg had a taste of hanging recently and barely escaped death. She stepped into the spring lock of the door of a new stable and wishing to re-enter, attempted to climb through a window. When she peaked her head through the safe and poked her feet by the neck. She could not move or scream. When found two hours later she was nearly dead.

From Friend to Friend.

Good the story of the excellence of Hood's Sarsaparilla and what it has accomplished, which is done on behalf of this medicine. We endeavor to tell honestly what Hood's Sarsaparilla is and what it will do, but what it has done is far more important and far more potent. Its unequalled record of cures is sure to convince those who have never tried it. Hood's Sarsaparilla is an excellent medicine.
