Death Rode in the Wagon. With a red, hazy shimmer the western prairie entitation of the present of the beautiful and bea of the late summer sun. Tired blads with dusty wings panted beside the sandy beds of dead rivers, thirst-crased cattle pawed weakly at the routs of dying cottonwoods-and the brazen sun glared

A covered wagon drawn by two oxen slowly clanked along the road. A fleryered man with sunken cheeks and bony fingers sat at the front driving. An emaciated woman, wan and ghastly, lay within, her eyes resting upon him, her hands feebly caressing a babe. Behind her, their bare, bony limbs crossed in the last death struggle, lay two other chilfren-a girl of perhaps fifteen and a boy a year younger. As the wagon crushed across a sand bed in the run of a winter stream, a board nailed to a cottonwood on the bank caught the woman's guze,
