It Worked to Perfection

Two young women stood by the cash jer's window the other day. One was an ambitious writer of verse whose effusions had been persistently rejected by stony editors, and the other was a teacher out of a position and sorely in debt. They were engaged, just then, in commiserat ing each other, when suddenly a littl. brown dwarf with a hump and a mournfully patient face pushed her way up t the paying place. "My dear girl, now your everlasting chance," whispered th poetess excitedly. "Get right up be hind her, where she can't see you, and touch her hump. Then I'll follow suit. It's bound to bring us good luck; better than a rabbit's foot; never knew it to

"What nonsense! I won't be such a goose!" demvrred the teacher girl. "But go ahead yoarself," and she stood aside for the other to get into a secure position; the whole charm depending of course upon doing it unknown to the humpbacked one.

It is only necessary to add that the experiment was entirely successful, and that the poetess went straight home and wrote "Loving and Losing," which she rold today for-but that is another story, I can't tell it .- New York Recorder.
