A FAMILY FEUD.

Those two rival families repeated ons small scale the discords of the Montagues and Capulets, only, with due regard to the civilization of the times, instend of spilling blood, they spilled money. Instead of dead relatives, there had been many lawsuits, long and enresentment, for anger; they kept at law a first floor window down to the street with that obstinate delight in litigation which is one of the joys of provincial life. As usual it was a question of trifles-a stream of water that had taker a wrong direction; an unruly goat that had leaped from the field of one into the field of the other; some obscure and stupid potatoes which, spreading them selves underground, had disregarded the boundaries.

Upon this showered legal documents The lawyers toiled to write in that style of theirs-the last relic of barbarous in vasions; judgments were multiplied lawsuits grew complicated. The two advocates rubbed their hands for joy and from the aspect of things were sure of transmitting, as a valuable inheri tance, those quarrels to their sons. How the enmity between Pasquali and the Dericca families had been caused could not be clearly learned; affirmation va ried on one and the other side. But i was a deep and declared enmity.

Being neighbors in town and in the country they frequently met, looking askance at each other; the womer heard mass in two different churches; it the Dericca girls were blue gowns the Pasquali girls at once put on pink ones in the municipal council the Pasqual were always conservative and the Derices, naturally, radical: that which one did the other would not do for a thousand scudi: where one went the other did not appear. And then gossip evil speaking, complaints, eagerness for scandal, malignity: in short, all that out fit of pleasing things which take place in provincial towns between two riva families. On the top of all this Carlo, the eldest son of the Pasquali, and Maria the second daughter of the Dericca thought it best to fall in love with eacl

Love in a small town has not much variety. Usually it begins in childhood continues amid games of blindman' buff, is apt to manifest itself in sociadancing porties and round games and it always ratified by the parish priest and the mayor. These loves are recognized superintended, established, registered it the household comings and goings; pro | The families had a new falling out; Matected by grumbling grandfathers and by priestly uncles: loves without nerves without tears, without tendernesses and fancies; something extremely calm and slow-the crystallization of love. Bu Carlo Pasquali had had the incompara ble fortune to pass, once, a fortuight at Naples, which made him look with scorr upon provincial customs; and Maria Dericca at night, by feeble lamp had wept over the hapless heroine of Mastriani, and had envied them in their fantastic passions; therefore for these two was required an exceptional love. First it was a furtive glance; a softly murmured word, yet heard with singular perception by her who should bear it; a carnation pluk fallen from 1 halcony by reason of the wind of course a sudden pallor of his, a sudden blusi of hers; then, by the armed intervention of a rogue of a tifteen-year-old girl who came with a flatiron to smooth Maria's linen and the course of true love at the same time-a note and a brief reply; a little letter, a long letter, and finally those voluminous epistles of eight or ter sheets of note paper which mark the highest point of the folly of love.

Alas! The joy of the young people was brief, and sorrow rapidly arrived to destroy it. They were seen, spied, the news reached their respective papas, and all the thunderbolts of paternal wrath imbittered by eleven lawsuits, fell upor the heads of the poor lovers. The bal cony windows were closed, the boil were fastened on the terrace doors, the carnation pinks on the bush were count ed, walks were forbidden, or at least made without previous notice, the hour of going to mass varied each Sundaybut those two continued to love each

Failing to get payment from the family, he got his bill approved by two Justices, Graham and Mardis, and then sued the township before 'Squire Graham. From the justices' judgment, the township took an appeal. There was some evidence that the plaintiff agreed to cure Fatterman or make no charge.
