How to Restrict Immigration.

It needs no deep dissection to perceive that the people of the United States, without distinction of party, are virtually unanimous for additional restrictions upon immigration. It is not necessary and would hardly be timely to discuss whether additional restrictions that question has been given, and it is overwhelmingly in the affirmative. The American people are tired of seeing the wretched, downtrodden victims of foreign oppression dumped upon these shores, a mass of vitiated humanity, distinct in almost every characteristic from the elements that make up the American race.

It is right, it is imperative that Congress should enact the legislation as far as possible from moral and physical plagues, and the exclusion of undesirable immigrants is not a matter of expediency alone, but a duty. The paramount question, therefore, is: What method is best to accomplish such exclusion, to keep out the objectionable and undesirable while keeping our doors open to those who are a valuable addition to the strength and resources of the nation?

There are two methods, and only two, that have been suggested, and only two, that are possible. The first is to place a pecuniary qualification as a condition of admission. The second is to place a physical qualification as a condition of admission.

Prohibition in the South.

COLEMAN, S. C., Dec. 23.—After an all night session, the State Senate passed the Prohibition bill to its final reading this morning. This bill provides for the dispensing of all liquors by duly appointed officers of the State, and in its present position is engineered by the Prohibitionists, as an amendment to the regular Prohibition bill, as so far as this is concerned, it has no significance.

Two Successors for Somerset Courts.

Monday afternoon Mr. John John, aged sixty-one years, and his cousin—Mr. Amos Harnberger—aged sixty-six years, two respectable and industrious farmers of Somerset county, were in the morning, passed through the city on their way home from near Dr. Wisbille, Somerset county, where they had been the guests of Mr. John's brother—Mr. Joseph Johnson—for the past few weeks.

Random was seen by Mrs. Moran, who mistook him for a burglar. She called her husband, who attacked and beat Random and three like into the river.

MORE ABOUT PHRASES.

Having written about certain forms of speech that will avoid the use of adjectives, we will now carry over the same line of thought in connection with a series of examples. We have seen that dependent clauses may be abbreviated, thereby changing their character, as in the following: "We were to have an American play by an American author and presented by American actors."

Seven-year-old Lillie Bell of Calhoun county, Alabama, is said to weigh 145 pounds. A Topeka, Kansas policeman walks so little that he has worn only one pair of shoes in the last three years. Glasgow Venon, colored, who died near Falkland, N. B., the other day, was reputed to be 111 years of age.

Let us now examine these sentences: 1. "In California there is a lumbering village of 120 inhabitants and there are three, ten saloons." Here there are two clauses, but as the latter, fourth in this second is merely incidental it may be changed to "wherein which there are," or better still, "with thirteen saloons."

2. "The saw-mill is located near Trent, and shortly after work had commenced in the morning the large boiler exploded." This sentence is awkward because the second clause is not connected with the first. It may be changed to "wherein which there are," or better still, "with thirteen saloons."

3. "The new police station will be opened by Mayor Stuart and in the presence of other officials." This sentence is awkward because the second clause is not connected with the first. It may be changed to "wherein which there are," or better still, "with thirteen saloons."

4. "The attack came and with such severity that it could not be taken home." This sentence is awkward because the second clause is not connected with the first. It may be changed to "wherein which there are," or better still, "with thirteen saloons."

5. "The large reward offered for the arrest of Frank Coley was indeed detected from all parts of the country to try and capture the noted outlaw." This sentence is awkward because the second clause is not connected with the first. It may be changed to "wherein which there are," or better still, "with thirteen saloons."

6. "The following are some of the names of those who were admitted to the United States." This sentence is awkward because the second clause is not connected with the first. It may be changed to "wherein which there are," or better still, "with thirteen saloons."

7. "The following are some of the names of those who were admitted to the United States." This sentence is awkward because the second clause is not connected with the first. It may be changed to "wherein which there are," or better still, "with thirteen saloons."

News Items.

A manager to cost $1,500,000 is being talked about for the World's Fair. A company is to be organized in England for the manufacture of electric bicycles.

Pneumatic tires have been placed on baby carriages and are meeting with some success. General Center died recently at the age of 85 years. He resided in Michigan.

Seven-year-old Lillie Bell of Calhoun county, Alabama, is said to weigh 145 pounds. A Topeka, Kansas policeman walks so little that he has worn only one pair of shoes in the last three years.

Glenn Venon, colored, who died near Falkland, N. B., the other day, was reputed to be 111 years of age. The late poet John G. Whittier's estate at Amesbury, Mass., has inventoried $12,729. The poet's gold watch and chain were valued at $25.

H. H. Hogrebe, of Fenwick, Michigan, claims to have raised off a small place of ground during the past season $15,500 worth of peppermint. Miss Sadie Boyd, of Chevre, Wyoming, and a student at the Dever, Col., university, traveled 110 miles at the recent election to cast her first ballot. She voted the Republican ticket.

The solicitor of the treasury is of the opinion that the use of the Columbian half-dollar coin in the manufacture of various articles as souvenirs, such as spoons, forks, etc., would be a violation of the law. When a man in Grand's premises was exposing sympathy for Cyrus W. Field for his loss of the Manhattan elevated stock, the great financier exclaimed: "O, we have left Cyrus his last estate."

Mr. Marion Crawford, the novelist, said recently: "I think there is a richer field for the novelist in the United States than in Europe. There are more original characters to be found here and they are in greater variety." Florence Nightingale, the famous nurse of the Crime, and whose deeds of simple mercy and charity were enshrined in song and story until she became England's favorite heroine, is now 72 years old and lives in retirement.

During pupils' tests for discolored ink the unique method devised by Principal Voorhis, of the primary school at Williamsburg, Colorado, One boy, who was particularly naughty, had fifteen teeth extracted. Mr. Voorhis resigned at the unanimous request of the parents.

The age of 99 years the Rev. George L. Rogers, the oldest minister in Kentucky and possibly the oldest pensioner in the United States, died of burns from a blazing bed at his home near Louisville, Ky., on Monday night last week. He had been an active preacher until two years ago, and had fought in the Mexican and civil wars.

Five Rounds For a Bride.

MR. GARRETT, Pa. Dec. 22.—A desperate battle took place here last night between a jilted lover who followed the object of his affections from the old country in America. Here he met his rival. Until six o'clock when John Rotzki, Michael Lincovich and May Dunsky lived in a small town in Hungary. They were very desperate. In love with Mary, who finally fled to this country with John. Upon their arrival in New York they were married.

A pugilistic mill last night was to decide the issue of the loven's claims. Mary was selected as referee, and it is alleged agreed to take the victor for her husband. The men were stripped to the waist. Five rounds were fought, and both men had their faces battered almost into a jelly. The fight, which lasted 45 minutes, ended in a draw.
