Hood's Scurvy Cures

"I was afflicted with scurvy and sore throat, and I had to stop work. I tried many remedies, but nothing did me any good. I then bought Hood's Scurvy Cures, and after using a few bottles, I was completely cured. I can now do my work as usual, and I feel much better than I have for some time."—H. L. RAIDING THE PENSION ROLL.

This thirty years, to-day, Bill, since we joined the ranks of those, who have their names and numbers on the country's rolls.

The "morn we marched away, Bill, our eyes with a were filled, with the band that led our column, played "The Girls We Left Behind."

I was but a private, Bill, and proud to wear the blue; while a pair of gill-egged shoulder bags, our company were to you.

Your heart was warm and kind, Bill, and we always found it true; for when the fight was hottest, we could always count on you.

You never studied a course, Bill, or from any book or e'er, but we knew you were a hero.

You were generous to a fault, Bill, and when you found a man in need, you'd lend him every cent you had.

And a comrade needed money, you'd know just where to go.

The boys that followed you, Bill, they were all true and brave; but some of them are living still, and some have gone to rest.

You left an arm at Gettysburg, Bill, but we never heard you more, and we miss you every day.

But we never heard you more, and we miss you every day.

You're getting old and feeble, Bill, with the weight of passing years; and when, at last, you're laid to rest, you'll leave the boys to grieve.

There's a day, a long one, Bill, that we'll all have to face; and when that day comes, we'll all be there to bid you farewell.

They're old and gray, and feeble, Bill, and they're all gone to rest; and we miss them every day.

And we miss them every day.

And we miss them every day.

And we miss them every day.

And we miss them every day.

And we miss them every day.

And we miss them every day.

Looking for Gold.

An immediate benefit of the attack upon silver results from the new energy given to the discovery and development of gold and copper properties.

From the Anacosta Standard we learn that the best sign is found in the activity of prospectors.

During the last week location notices on placer ground have been filed in great numbers, and hundreds of men are now out in search of gold-prod ground.

This is true not only of Lewis and Clark country, which is shown by figures to be one of the richest gold regions in the country, but of all other sections of the State where gold has been discovered.

Large deals which contemplate extensive operations have lately been made in Madison county, and many eastern capitalists are becoming interested in gold as well as new properties.

Recent improvements in machinery and methods of working have made it possible to mine gold in the old gulches at a low cost, an illustration of this may be seen in the success of several large companies in Alder gulch, where gold was early discovered in Montana, and which was supposed to have been worked out under the crude methods of early days.

The rich fields around Pony are also being worked, and it is expected that they will be rapidly developed. The Butte papers tell us that prospectors are leaving their city by scores and have already made the discoveries in gold and copper within the vicinity of the great camp.

This satisfactory outlook is of special interest to the people of Helena, because within ten miles of the city, the developed gold properties greater than any ever yet discovered, and we predict that within the coming two years the results will be far more important than those of the fabulous rich places in the early days. The slump in silver is a direct cause of the new interest in this direction, and until the white metal recedes that justice which must certainly be accorded in the near future, the characteristic energy of the Montanians will be finally rewarded by work in these long neglected fields.

We are told in a hymn that is a righteous method of Providence to visit judgment on the people of this State for allowing the gold properties to go undeveloped.—Herald.

A Narrow Escape.

The tall, gaunt, balding man ate a beautiful dinner at the restaurant, and then with a check calling for 75 cents made his way to the cashier's desk.

He handed the check to a battered silver dollar, and looked sidler than ever.

The cashier picked up the dollar and examined it suspiciously. It had a deep dent on one side, and looked as though it had been plucked. At that moment the customer spoke: "It is very painful for me to part with that dollar. It saved my life once, however, and must do so again. At the siege of Vicksburg I carried it in my vest pocket, and the day you see there was made by a bullet, which otherwise would have killed me. I have kept it as a memorial, and it will bring back my heart to let it go; but I must—It has nothing else."

The cashier was plainly interested. "In what year was the siege of Vicksburg?"

"Sixty-three," said the sal man promptly.

"And this dollar," returned the cashier, "is dated 1877, and is a counterfeit."

The sal man looked annoyed. "Of course it is," he replied. "How could I have an 1877 dollar in '76 if it wasn't a counterfeit?"

And the cashier was so dumfounded that he passed out a quarter in change and allowed the sal man to escape.

Counting the Stars.

"I was walking along one winter's night, hurrying toward home, with my little maidens at my side. Said she: 'Father, I am going to count the stars.'"

"Very well, I said, 'go on.'"

"By and by I heard her counting— 'Two hundred and twenty-three, two hundred and twenty-five. O dear, she said, 'I had no idea there were so many.'"

"Ah, dear friend, I sometimes say to my soul, 'Now, Master, I am going to count the benefits.'"

"Soon my heart sighs, not with sorrow, but hardened with such goodness, and I say to myself, 'I had no idea that there were so many.'"

Carbonic Acid in the Dairy.

Since solidified carbonic acid became a commercial product it has proved useful for many purposes, two recent applications being of general interest.

A very simple process of preservation is by its aid. The butter is placed in an iron vessel or can provided with a pipe and tap, by means of which the carbonic acid is injected under a pressure of six atmospheres, driving out the air, and in this condition the butter will remain perfectly fresh for four or five weeks, or longer. In the second application the carbonic acid is forced into the cream, the liquid is then converted into an agreeable effervescent beverage, which will retain its freshness for six weeks.

The Hand of Fate.

"Mary Jane," exclaimed the editor of the Biograph "Vindicator, rushing hurriedly into the house, 'put me up a little lunch as quick as you can! Where is my valise?'"

"In my room," said the master, "Janey?"

"Mother!" he shouted, diving into the bureau drawer for clean shirts and other things necessary for a journey, "nothing's the matter, only I want last night that 'we noticed Ed, Alford riding about the city this morning at a comfortable jog, and it came out in the paper this morning containing a jag! I start for the world's fair in a year or thereabouts, but I'm still alive."—Chicago Tribune.

A Young Woman's Reasoning.

"I am told, dear, that Jack Kaitiegate spent most of his vacation in your back parlor. Aren't you giving him rather a dangerous amount of encouragement?"

"Why, no, dear, he is merely a boy. He's only a year older than I, but I shall be out next winter, while Jack has two years more in college, and I will be six years after that before he can earn anything. So practically he is six years younger than I, and that makes him 12. It is absurd to talk of encouraging a boy so young as that."—Harper's Bazar.

It for Tat.

Collector. "I really can't understand why you don't pay me my little bill. You have never given me a single cent."

Hostetter McGinnis. "If time was not money I'd explain it to you."

"Well, you were complaining just now that I hadn't given you anything. You are always grumbling about nothing."

"You promised to pay me three months ago, and I relied on you."

"That's so."

"And you lied."

"Precisely so. I lied on you and you relied on me, so we are even. Good-by."—Texas Siftings.
