KILLED BY DYNAMITE WHILE FISHING.

"Joe" Boyer, of Hoopesville, Meets With an Awful Death.

Joseph W. Boyer, a well-known citizen of the village of Hoopesville, met with a sad death about ten o'clock Friday afternoon, while engaged in fishing in the Stonycreek. Several stories are current in regard to how the accident happened, but the best authenticated is that Boyer and two companions were fishing with dynamite at a point where Kaufman's run empties into the Stonycreek, directly opposite the S. & C. R. R. water tank. Boyer was immersed up to his arms pits in a deep pool of water when a dynamite cartridge exploded in the pool and he was instantly killed by the concussion. His companions hastened to Hoopesville where they secured assistance and returning to the pool recovered the body. This story is confirmed by the fact that several explorations were made by persons living in the neighborhood of Hoopesville. The time Boyer was killed, and by the additional fact that several exploded dynamite shells were found on the bank of the pool from which his body was recovered. Boyer's companions who were engaged in an unlawful undertaking. They simply say that Boyer fell into the water and drowned before they could rescue him. He slipped from a rock into the pool, about ten feet deep, and fell into the water. In a moment his head reappeared above the surface of the water and he cried for help. One of the men reached him a pole but he could grasp hold of it. He sank to the bottom of the stream and the men went to his aid. One of the young men dropped into a seat directly opposite and a fishing rod which he was using was pulled to the opposite side of the aisle and the third walked to the rear of the car. As soon as all had taken their positions the first mentioned train a small explosion occurred near the water tank. The explosion was produced by a dynamite cartridge which had been exploded by the engineer. It exploded a few moments after the explosion at the water tank. It exploded a few moments after the explosion at the water tank.

Death in the Storm.

S. J. McKensie Killed on the Railroad.

Yesterday afternoon Justice of the Peace S. J. McKensie, of Summit township, was run over and instantly killed by a freight train at Garrett station. The unfortunate man was walking on the R. & O. R. R. track and was carrying an umbrella to shield him from the heavy rain that was falling at the time. The train was a freight train, and was moving at a fast rate. The man was struck by one of the wheels of the train, and was instantly killed. His body was found on the tracks, and was removed to the hospital. The train was delayed for some time, and the passengers were inconvenienced. The railroad officials are investigating the accident, and are trying to determine the cause of it. It is thought that the man may have been careless, and that he may have been drinking. The railroad officials are also investigating the condition of the tracks, and are trying to determine if there was anything wrong with them. The accident is a sad one, and is a reminder to all of the dangers of crossing the tracks. We hope that no more such accidents will occur.

It is just as difficult to keep knives out of a vast crowd of people, such as attended the Lutheran picnic at Rockwood last Thursday, as it is to keep them out of a vast crowd of people, such as attended the Lutheran picnic at Rockwood last Thursday. The picnic was held in the neighborhood of the picnic grounds, but the bald attempt to rob that ever came under the eye of the reporter occurred on the excursion train shortly after it left Rockwood. Three young men entered the rear car and in a few moments they were in the hands of the police. They were taken to the station, and are now in custody. The picnic was a success, and the weather was fine. The people enjoyed themselves very much, and the picnic was a great success.

Attention! Attention! Farmers desiring to have their threshers and the straw tied to bundles by machinery will do well to communicate with A. C. Miller & Co., at Lakesville. Satisfaction guaranteed.
